Medical men have their folklore, as have the propie at large. Mistaken dens, sunctioned by time, die hard. even among so called men of science. in the differentiation of diseases and the sorting of causes and effects it is fittle wonder that there should have arisen confusion of ideas that to a degree still persist.

There is a general belief that it is biglly dangerous to drink cold water in wagin weather when we are very warm, and in a much recommended book on dietetics, of the present century the warping against this practice is down in black and white.

If we trace this teaching to its origin, we find that the fatalities that occurred from this practice always imppened when the temperature of the air was $5 degrees or upward. The symptoms described are those of sunstroke or heat exhaustion, and the clinicians of the day had confused, or rather not yet differentiated, the effects of heat suppression and the very Hillerent experience of giving the interfor of the stomach a cold bath.

So strong was the belief that the taking of a cold drink, and not the inability to get rid of heat, was the cause of those pathological catastrophes of hot weather that in one of our largest cities a century since the hunume society placed printed posters on the public pumps, warning the hot and thirsty to pause before imbibing and hold the cup in the hands until some of the dangerous cold was extracted from the water. Very different from what a humane society might be doing in this day .- New York Medical Journal.

The 75 ap active rogue, and continually rising from the bottom to the surface, at times jumping above the water in pursuit of food. He changes his home and feeding ground as the season passes. In the spring he is found in shallow water in streams and rivers, below rapids and rifles, and as the water warms up he moves to deep pools sheltered by logs, weeds or ledges. During the summer, he migrates to greater depths, where the water is cool.

The same is true of the lake bass, In the spring he frequents the shutlow places, but later he give into the weeds and fily pads. The small month bass fayors stony bars or shouls varying in depth from 2 to 40 or 50 feet. while the large-mouth prefers weeds and muddy bottoms.

Mars Green as Well as Red.

A few weeks ago we mentioned that an English astronomer had gone to Teneriffe to make observations of Mars during the planet's nearest approach to the earth for the past 13 years. Mr. P. Ryves recently sent the following message to a London paper:

"My instruments have been installed at Izana at an altitude of Sikki feet. The sky is cloudless.

"Mars has been observed at about the time of its least distance from the earth. Snow around both planet's poles is abundant. The south temperate regions are dark and pronouncedly greenish.

"The rest of the side of the planet now visible shows little detail but there are red color marks suggesting clear, dry weather over this put of Mars."-Montreal Family Herald.
