A KING'S DREAM.

corrupt. "God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it. * * Thou art weighed in the balances and art found wanting. * * Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians." The Medo-Persian kingdom, represented by the breast and arms of silver of the great image, was universal, and it began well. After the deliverance of Daniel from the den of lions, King Darius issued a decree "unto all people, nations and languages," calling attention to the living God, and to His wonderful power in delivering His servant. Daniel prospered; righteousness was exalted. Early in the history of Medo-Persia the Jews were allowed to return to their own land; Jerusalem was rebuilt, and the chosen people of God were protected in carrying on their Heaven-appointed work. But as time passed, the Medes and Persians became enervated, as a result of wealth, drunkenness and vice, and they became an easy prey to the staunch and valiant soldiers of Alexander the Great.

The Grecian kingdom, represented by the belly and thighs of brass, left the Israelites free to carry on the work that God had commissioned them to do. It is related of Alexander that on the occasion of his campaign against Jerusalem, he was met outside the city by the priests of the temple and by little children dressed in white. On his coming up to them at the head of his soldiers he at once dismounted from his famous horse, Bucephalus, and made the most humble obeisance to the high priest, and he made peace with the Jews. To his generals, who asked him the reason for his strange conduct, he replied that he had seen this same company in a dream, and he was instructed that he should do them no harm. However, the people of Greece failed to follow the way of truth, Rome, symbolized by the legs of iron, next ruled the world. Although Rome was far from favorable to the Christian faith, yet the protection granted Paul and other Roman citizens favored the early gospel church. It was not long, however, until persecution raged against the early Christians, and millions were slain. Dark Ages came on rapidly. The strongest and the last universal empire that the world has ever seen was destroyed as the result of its own corruption, and was broken into ten parts, symbolized by the ten toes of the great image. The ten kingdoms of Western Europe into which Rome was divided are the remnants of the great nations of the past.

In the midst of these kingdoms the Reformation of the sixteenth century took place, and its bright beams enlightened the whole world. The nations of earth are now engaged in feverish preparation for another terrific conflict. Wars and rumors of wars are among the last signs noted in Bible prophecy. The fact stands beyond any denial that Europe is at the present moment threatened not with mere economic ruin, but with a complete overthrow. The time is near when Christ, who is symbolized by the stone that was cut out without hands, will smite the image upon its feet, and the nations of the earth will pass away. The prophet says: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever. (Daniel 2:44.)

Only the righteous can enter into the pure and beautiful kingdom of God. The Gospel is rapidly being carried to all the world, and when its work is finished, the end will come.

Near East Relief Worker Saves Three Refugees From the Turks and Brings Them to This Country

Miss Katherine Reynolds McCormick, Near East Relief worker and the Rev. Kachadour Kroozian, whom she rescued from the Turks and brought to this country together with two Armenian girl refugees. Mr. Kroozian has witnessed eleven Turkish massacres.

Saved from death by the Near East Relief during the Turkish massacres of the Greeks and Armenians in Smyrna, Miss Vosken Annanian, on her arrival in this country, told a pathetic story of her experiences. She is here with another girl refugee, the first to reach America from the Smyrna district. Behind her lie the horrors that have seared her memory with blood—pictures of boys and girls massacred and hacked to pieces before her eyes. Before her lies the vision of a higher education at Northwestern University, at Chicago, where an association of young students will help to take the sadness from her eyes and restore the glow of youth. One of three refugees brought to this country by Miss Katherine Reynolds McCormick, a worker of the Near East Relief, the young girl—she is but nineteen years old—told a story that brought tears to the eyes. The two other girls found by Miss McCormick in Constantinople are Miss Nevard Moscovian, twenty years old, and Miss Zeroushi Kalendarian, both of whom will attend Goucher College in Baltimore. "It was the Near East Relief that saved me," Miss Annanian said. "When we heard the Turks were coming we fled to the Near East Relief Orphanage that had been given to the city for Americans, and could therefore, fly the Stars and Stripes. At 11 o'clock the Turk soldiers entered the city and there began a scene of murder, pillage and countless atrocities that I cannot tell. "From my window I could see terrible sights. A boy I knew was hacked to pieces by the soldiers in the street. A little girl, seven years old, her face mutilated, fell dead on our door step. In the morning we were given the protection of a Turkish policeman under orders from the American Consul. "All of my people had taken refuge under foreign flags, but the American flag was the safest of all. A few days later the fire started. With 400 boy orphans, the officials of the home, my mother and myself were forced out on the street.

"We paraded from one place of safety to another as the flames pursued us. At our head was carried an American flag, and the last of the line carried another. They kept us from molestation. Soon thirteen girls who had become separated from the refugees of the girls' orphanage, joined us and they, too, found protection under the flag. "No water or food for two days. The boys were suffering. No place to stay. At night we were roped in and the flags were placed in conspicuous positions. We camped in front of an Armenian woman's house and she gave us her last bit of flour which we made into cakes for the boys. "At last we were taken on board the American destroyer Lichfield and carried to safety in Constantinople. There I met Miss McCormick and now I am here. "If Americans knew how wonderful is the work of Near East Relief they would rally to its support and, for humanity's sake, contribute generously to its work of relief."

Starvation and Disease Are Menace In Flight of Refugees From Turkey

These Armenian children, worn out and hungry, were found by Near East Relief workers and saved from starvation, following their deportation by the Turks.

Exhausted by their slow and weary flight toward Macedonia, vast swarms of refugees who crowd the country roads now face starvation and disease. Thousands will perish in the next few months it seems certain unless food is sent at once.

Scarlet fever has broken out and cholera and typhoid threaten, because of the utter lack of sanitation. There is a great need for doctors, nurses and medicines.

Children are the worst sufferers and the most pathetic. There is no milk for most of them. In the past few days many infants have been brought into the world without medical attention in the camps pitched along the roads at Drama. At Balava the roads are choked with weary refugees, who face starvation, because they have no mills to grind the wheat in their possession.

Outside of Dedagatch 20,000 refugees are encamped in tents provided by the Greek army. Hundreds of others, moving slowly toward Macedonia with their ox carts, crowd all the approaches to the town from the Maritza side. Fifty thousand of the disconsolate folk have been traveling afoot for ten days. Most of them have no food and very little water. The rain falls with disheartening steadiness and the cold has become more bitter, bringing on many deaths.

The Near East Relief is appealing for contributions to help save the lives of these unfortunates.
