THE BRACELET

By JANE GORDON

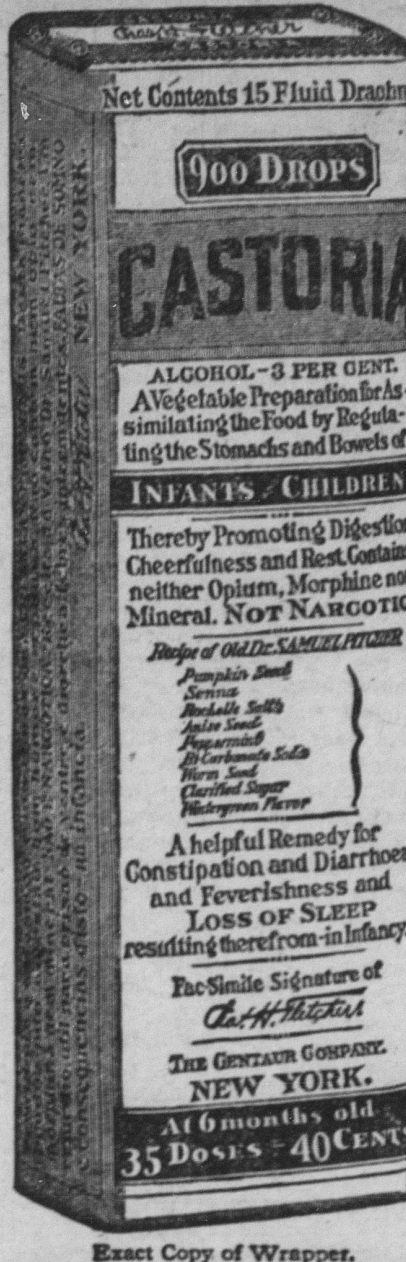

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

Grant, sitting before the fire in the village inn, reflected pleasantly upon his adventurous afternoon. This, perhaps because he had been forced to ride in a saddle instead of the customary automobile. And because in the woodland path he had met a charming maid clad in a scarlet cape. Aunt Martha, the erratic and uncertain, had sent him upon this errand to the far wood in search of an old house which she had seen advertised in the city paper.
She had made known her intention of leaving Grant her heir.
She wanted this Walden house, she explained, as a refuge from friends, both social and charitable.
"I can go and come there as I please," she told her favorite nephew, "and I hope, Grant, that you will find the place as promising as the advertisement reads."
Grant had found the isolated country beautiful, even in the winter's first fall of snow. Then, as though in answer to his wish for direction, the young woman of the scarlet cape appeared. She came to view from behind an evergreen tree and the hood of her cape, falling back, disclosed golden-brown hair, ruffled and wavy.
The girl's brown eyes, meeting his, were startled—wide like a child's. But to Grant's question she merely stretched forth a white arm to point the way, and before she had withdrawn the arm into the fold of her cape his attention was attracted to a strange black bracelet that she wore. Flashing from its center was a great white stone.
Silently the girl hurried on. But her image stayed with him as he rode toward Walden house, and Grant had gone on smiling at the romance.
An elderly woman gave him entrance to the house at the end of the wood. She was a friend of the new owner, she told him, occupying the place with her until such time as it should be sold. Grant decided, after a view of the quaint, well-kept rooms, that the house would exactly suit his mind.
Returning in the early twilight of the winter afternoon he felt a thrill of anticipation at the possibility of a second vision of the woodland maid.
And she had passed him again, returning from her walk. Her arm waved a parting salute to him. Grant saw the flash of the black bracelet as the moon came to light the darkening way.
"Walden house?" the innkeeper answered his question—"Oh, yes, I know it well. The place came to the present owner through a legacy. It's quite a story. Belonged to Miss Patience Walden long years ago. Patience had a lover when she was young, and he gave her a bracelet—so they say—a queer black bracelet with a white stone in it. Then they quarreled just before the wedding, and the lover married another woman. Folks said it was because of the black betrothal bracelet that he had given Patience.
"As years passed Patience grew lonely and sent for a niece to come and live with her. Daisy Walden was a happy singing creature. I remember her well. But one day when she was wearing the bracelet her aunt had loaned her as a treat—well, Daisy lost it along the woodland path and that terrible old woman in her rage accused her niece of stealing the trinket—and Daisy was sent away. We read in the city papers later of her marriage in the home of the relatives who had taken her in.
"And still later, when Daisy had a little girl of her own, her tender heart forgave the lonely old woman in Walden house, and she wrote a letter saying that she and the baby, Patience, would come to her aunt for a visit. But old Patience still hugged her spite and would have none of them.
"Then, home came Jennie Wells, who had been away since the time of her marriage many years before. And when Jennie heard about old Patience and her long spite, Jennie told all innocently, of a bracelet she'd found before she went away and thought nothing of its value—it was somewhere among her trinkets—so she found it and took it to Patience.
"In her remorse Patience drew up a will leaving all she had to Daisy's young daughter—the black bracelet with the rest. And only now Daisy Walden's daughter comes on to claim her legacy and to sell the property.
"But I," added the innkeeper with an ominous shake of his head, "would rather not see that black bracelet of misfortune upon that sweet young creature's arm."
Grant rode again that night down the narrow path of the wood. An uncontrollable impulse carried him there, and though he was eagerly hoping, yet he was not expecting to see—here—there. At the crosspath she stood as though, waiting—the elder woman of the big house was with her. His woodland maid smiled.
"We were on our way to the inn to consult with you regarding Walden house, Mr. Dacre," she said.
It was when Grant's Aunt Martha was installed in the house and young Patience had happily agreed to remain as her companion that Grant again saw the black bracelet upon the arm of his fiancée. She laughed at his glance of disapproving concern.
"Why, dear," said Patience, "this is my bracelet of good fortune. Had I not come all this way to claim it, should I have found you?"

Declares Tanlac Ended Indigestion, Chest Pains and Palpitation—Lost Strength Restored.

"Tanlac has improved my general condition ten times more than I anticipated," recently stated Herbert A. Gupfill, a well-known school teacher of Kenos Falls, Maine.
"My trouble began with a sudden loss of strength. Almost everything I ate disagreed with me and caused a sickening sensation that remained with me for hours. For months I found breathing difficult on account of indigestion, and had such chest pains and palpitation I thought my heart was affected. I also suffered greatly from headaches and nervousness, seldom slept well, and felt tired and worn-out all the time.
"Since taking Tanlac no kind of food hurts me and I have a wonderful appetite. I have gained ten pounds, breathe freely, sleep perfectly, and feel as strong and well as ever in my life. Tanlac is certainly a superior medicine."
Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Explanation Offered as to Why the Gentler Sex is Acknowledged the More Voluble.
Why do women talk more than men?
Dr. A. A. Brill, professor of psychology at New York university and well known psychoanalyst, told the National Association of Teachers of Speech why, at their convention at the university.
"There is no question that women are more voluble than men," said Doctor Brill, and, strange to say, none of the women delegates rose to argue with him. "Many discussions and explanations have been offered."
Doctor Brill offered one by Doctor Jespersen, the eminent philologist. It was couched very scientifically, but the meat of it is that woman's vocabulary is smaller and more centralized than man's, but always on tap. She can get at it very quickly, and does so frequently. Now, man's lingual abilities are scattered. He cannot always get at it in time to have a comeback ready for the wife.
