Caused by Troubles Women Often Have—Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Medina, New York.—"I had a great deal of trouble such as women often have, and this affected my nerves. For over two years I suffered this way, then I read in the 'Buffalo Times' about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have taken it with very good results. I am very much better and feel justified in praising the Vegetable Compound to my friends and neighbors who suffer from anything of the kind."—Mrs. Wm. H. Adkins, 311 Erin Road, Medina, N. Y.

Rochester, N. Y.—"After my twin girls were born I was all run-down. My neighbors thought I was going to die. I saw your advertisement in the paper and bought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The first bottle helped me and I kept on taking it. I only weighed ninety pounds when I began taking it, and I have gained in weight and feel like a girl of sixteen. I never can say enough for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. NELLIE DOREY, 16 Skuse Park, Rochester, N. Y.

"One of the troubles of merchandising in a small town," confessed the proprietor of the Wigly Wabby store in Peevecuddyhump, "is that our people are too well acquainted with each other. Nearly every time I attempt to reason with a lady about the terrible injustice done to local merchants by customers patronizing mail order concerns in distant cities, she comes right back at me with the information that my own wife sends away five times as much money to the mail order octopus—or octopi; I am not exactly clear as to which is the plural of octopus—as she herself does."—Kansas City Star.

SALESMANSHIP

WHETHER you are taking orders for threshing machines or life insurance, or drawing a salary of ten dollars a week, you are a salesman. In the first instance you are selling somebody else's product. In the last you are selling your own. You will sell threshing machines or life insurance faster if you know something about them, and believe in them. You will sell your own services for a higher price if you believe in yourself. If the merchandise you offer is not worth the price you ask for it, you can't be sincere in your efforts to dispose of it.

And if you do not absolutely know that your services are worth more than you are getting for them, you will never be able to get more. All salesmanship that is worth anything is based on confidence. You will find it hard work to convince people of anything you do not believe yourself. Before you make any effort to raise your own salary be sure that it ought to be raised. Compare yourself with other people doing the same work for the same wages.

If they are better than you are at the job, don't ask for a raise until you have made yourself better than they are. Your hands or your brains are the commodity you have to dispose of. Make them just as efficient, just as productive as you can. Discover and eliminate the faults that keep them from doing their best.

Work, study, practice—bring yourself up to a higher point of usefulness. Then when you begin to talk about getting more money you will have an argument. Believe in yourself thoroughly and other people will believe in you. But remember that you cannot sincerely believe in yourself unless you are convinced that you can really produce more than the other men who are doing the same kind of work. (© by John Blake.)

SCHOOL DAYS

From idle stumblers they call youth and point the way to honor and fame; from the valley of gloom they bid the despondent to look up to the glorious heavens; from the mire of sin they lift up the fallen, seeking no reward but the joy that is theirs from doing good. They sin as we all sin, but unlike most of us, they are charitable towards all mankind, prayerful, watchful, faithful. When the chimes in the belfry chant their evening hymns, no souls on earth are more serenely peaceful than the

WHAT DIES?

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHAT dies? Most certainly the pine— Will never die—descendants brave Maintain the old majestic line— The very oak above the grave Speaks Nature's continuity. What dies? Not, certainly, the tree.

What dies? The bud, the rose, the seed, Each has its time and has its turn. One needs his garden but to read Of life's eternity to learn. That every springtime will disclose. What dies? Not, certainly, the rose.

What dies? The sun will fade, the stars Come out, and then the stars will fade— But still the midnight has its Mark. The day will have its light and shade. The sun again when night is done. What dies? Not, certainly, the sun.

What dies? The river finds the sea, The sea the sky, the sky the hill— The hill shall give us presently The river from the mountain rill. With star and sun again to gleam. What dies? Not, certainly, the stream.

What dies? Shall only one thing die?— God's mind in human minds expressed? Shall tree and rose live on, and I Expire, this spark within my breast? Is death the end of all the plan? What dies? Not, certainly, the man! (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"DUNCE"

DURING the middle ages certain theologians were called "schoolmen" because they were taught in the cathedral schools and cloisters founded by Charlemagne and his successors. At first these men were revered and looked up to. Their writings were the court of last resort; their opinions, authoritative. Later, however, their works fell out of favor because the form of their speculations was unattractive and their works were not written in classical Latin. There were some, though, who still clung to the teachings of the schoolmen in general and to the doctrines of one Duns Scotus, a great teacher of the Franciscan order. In particular, whenever an adherent of the old learning would seek to bolster up his contentions by referring to the works of Scotus, his opponent would seek to silence him with the rejoinder: "Oh, you are a Dunsman," or, more briefly, "You are a Duns," an epithet of scorn which gradually found its way into the language with the slightly altered spelling "dunce." Thus it is that the name of one of the best known doctors of the church, admitted a keen and sharp-witted teacher, has been turned into a by-word for stupidity and obstinate dullness. ### THE GOLD FISHES

Mr. Pekin Baxter and Mr. Tokio Jones, the two gold fishes, were chatting together in their gold-fish way as they swam about the fish-bowl in the living room. They were enjoying themselves immensely. They had just had a very good meal, and they had not been given too much. "It is strange," said Mr. Pekin Baxter, "but there are many people who feed their gold fishes too much. I hear the friends of our mistress talking, and they ask her such absurd questions. 'They say: If the fishes leave food untouched which you've given to them it shows you've given them too much, doesn't it?' 'You don't want to give them so much that they could possibly leave any untouched, and the way to do that is to give them very, very little. 'For gold fishes eat more than they should when it is given to them, and when they leave food untouched it means they've been given a great deal beyond what they could possibly eat, and a great, great deal beyond what they should eat. 'Gold fishes have small stomachs; they're not taking great long swims and lots of exercise, and they shouldn't be fed too much.' 'Yes, that is what our mistress tells her friends. 'And that is right, too," said Mr. Tokio Jones. "It is strange how ignorant people are about feeding gold fishes and how many of them think that as long as the gold fishes eat up all their food they've been given the right amount! 'Dear me, it is surprising how ignorant people are. 'Well," said Mr. Pekin Baxter, "it is true that people can't read our thoughts—what few ones we have to read—and they can't tell unless they know just how much gold fishes want to eat, for people haven't the tastes of gold fishes, nor have they the stomachs of gold fishes, nor have they the wishes of gold fishes. 'Nor," said Mr. Tokio Jones, waving a fin, and grinning a funny grin, "are they gold fishes!" 'Well," said Mr. Pekin Baxter, "I'm glad when news about gold fishes is spread about, for we don't want to get sick, and our relations don't mean to be greedy, but when they see so much before them it is hard not to eat and eat and eat. 'Of course, too, it is hard to tell when we're not feeling well, for the way to tell about us not feeling well is a different way from the way people have of telling if they're not well or if their children are not well. 'When our little mistress does not seem to be well the doctor comes, and he says, 'Stick out your tongue,' and then he usually says: 'Ah, just what I thought! Yes, a little tonic will do you good.' 'Or perhaps he says, 'Some medicine is what you need, and then you'll be all right.' 'A tongue is most important, to some, for it seems to be an excellent thing in its way of showing whether a person is well or not. 'Yes," agreed Mr. Tokio Jones, "with people a tongue is important; or, perhaps I should say, many tongues are important, for they all have one apiece. 'But with us it is different," said Mr. Pekin Baxter. "We need our dorsal fins. They are all important; or, perhaps I should say, each one of us has a dorsal fin and it is very important. 'I think, perhaps, that is the correct way to speak. 'Some may not know what the dorsal fin is, but if they will look at you or me, or at any of the members of our family, they will see a fin which is spread up on top of our backs. It is a fine, straight, healthy-looking fin when we are well, but when we're sick that fin droops and does not stay out nice and smooth. 'So people can tell if the gold fish is well by the way his dorsal fin or the fin upon his back looks, and a person can tell if another person is well by the look on his tongue. 'So let the people have their tongues—they need them—but let the fishes have their dorsal fins. 'My dorsal fin is not wrinkled up—it looks like a handsome, outspread fan, and that shows I'm healthy, and yours is the same way, Tokio, and so you're healthy, too. Hurrah, splash, splash, gurgie, bubble!"
