REBERSBURG.

Samuel Winters and his mother left for Kaneville, Illinois, where they will make their future home.

Mrs. George Brechtall, who spent the past winter in Pittsburgh, returned to town a few days ago.

Mrs. Lester Minnick and two sons are spending this week in Millinburg visiting relatives.

Edwin Wolf is building a large porch to the front of his residence.

Mrs. Norman Biery is at Potters Mills assisting in nursing her sick father, who is in a critical condition.

Some of our "forenoon" farmers who planted their corn the first week in May, are now busy replanting the same.

Rev. McClellan's son, Dr. McClellan, and family, are visiting under the parental roof.

The state road through Rebersburg received an application of road oil a few days ago.

The stock sale held on Saturday by Frank Stover was well attended and all stock, consisting of milk cows and hogs, brought fair prices.

George Day and wife, who were employed by Mr. Barffes, near Centre Hall, for the past two months, quit their job and have moved into the Elias Breon property near Smulton.

India's Sacred River.

The Ganges is the sacred river of the Hindus. On its banks are many temples and holy places such as Benares, Allahabad, Hardwar and Gangotri. According to the legend Princess Ganda, a Hindu goddess, of long ago, turned herself into this great river, that she might enrich and purify the country. Devout Hindus bathe themselves in its sacred waters and pray to die beside it. It is their desire that their bodies may be burned upon its waters and allowed to float on down to the sea. The length of the main stream of the Ganges is 1,507 miles, and its every bend is sacred. Pilgrims walk from its source and back again, taking six months or more for the pilgrimage. Before the Juggernaut car which rolled in the procession along its banks, fanatics used to throw themselves, to be crushed to death amid the applause of the worshippers. This is now forbidden by law as is also the burning of widows on the funeral pyre of their husbands, and the casting of babes into the sacred river.

Ancients Knew of Asbestos.

It is said to have been established that the ancient Greeks and Romans were aware of the fireproof properties of asbestos and made use of it in burying their kings. During the height of the Roman empire native kings and members of the nobility wore asbestos cloaks. According to an old legend, Charlemagne had his cloak and table covers made from this mineral, and mystified his guests by throwing the strange fabric on a fire and then withdrawing it undamaged.

Marco Polo, in 1250 A. D., visited the Great Khan of Tartary and found a fireproof material being manufactured from what he believed was the skin of the salamander—an animal popularly supposed to be immune from fire. It has been established that it was really asbestos fabric.

Commoner Who Made Many Lords. William Pitt, the younger, when he first became prime minister of England, found 250 peers in the house of lords. In nineteen years he created 140 more.

"He made peers of second-rate squires and fat graziers," Disraeli said of him. "He clutched them from the counting houses of Cornhill and caught them in the alleys of Lombard street."

Pitt rarely rose before noon and it is said that he often did not work after dinner, because he was intoxicated. He arrived at the house of commons drunk on the day when war was declared between England and France in 1793.

Too Hot for Her Joh. "Do you believe that people follow the same occupation in the next world that they do on earth?" "My mother-in-law won't. She makes ice cream."—London Tit-Bits.
