Beauty and Health

Wheeling, W. Va.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription gave me health and strength when all other medicines had failed to help me. I suffered for over a year with feminine weakness. I had sick-headaches all the time, my back hurt me, I had pains in my side and bearing pains. I was nervous, could not sleep and was really in a miserable condition when I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's medicine. I took the 'Favorite Prescription' and used the 'Lotion Tablets' and by use of these medicines I was completely restored to health—cured of all my ailments. I have been well and strong ever since."—Mrs. Clarence Richards, 3615 East St.

OPPOSITION
By CORONA REMINGTON

JASON CARUTHERS had two jolly old blue eyes that sparkled with mirth and looked out upon life with a sort of amused sympathy, a tolerance and understanding, a kind of rule of thumb psychology based upon years of contact with human nature. "Folks ain't actually bad," he would say, "that is, sure enough, downright bad. Just you let a man know you think he's going to skin you or lay down on the job or whatever it is, and he'll do it or bust. But you expect the best of a man and the good'll come out."

From this it can be seen that Jason Caruthers was not a great man nor a wonderful one, but sort of a homely old philosopher with a heart as big as a house and a sympathy that surpasseth understanding. Caruthers was a shining mark for those who were weary and heavy laden, and he would always send them away with fresh courage and inspiration and often with a feeling that their woes weren't so bad after all.

Came a day when Bill Fleming, the idol of the town, walked into Caruthers' little store with a dragging and a droop to his great big shoulders. "You're a swell looking football player today," Jason greeted. "What's the matter? But I can look at your eyes and see it's a case of heart trouble."

"Sorry," he said after a pause. "I didn't mean to butt in, but I was sorry."

Bill, feeling the other's contrition and subconsciously anxious for some one to talk to, hurried to make amends. "Glad you did, Uncle Jason, and you're right. Me and Amelia's about to split up."

"Sure enough now. Don't feel like telling me that trouble? Mebbe I could help a little."

"Getting too flighty. Running around to all these dances and going with that Watkins feller and she's bobbed her hair and the other day she had paint on her face—paint!"

"Do tell. That is pretty bad. She's a sweet little trick, Bill; I always did like her—not much bigger'n your arm. I used to watch you and her out walking Sundays and I'd think it'd be no end nice if you two was to get married some day. And so it's all off? Have you quarreled or did you just quit?"

"Quarreled. We've been fussing for two months."

"You know what I believe, son? I believe you're right. The more you talked the worse she did get. There ain't nothing wrong with Amelia but she's kinder dare-devilish and mischievous, and it's just enough for you to tell her not to do a thing to make her want to do it. She's sorter proud of her own power, and it's gone to her head a mite. Now, if I was you, I'd give her plenty o' rope and not get after her no more about nothing. You know, opposition'll make a peaceful little lamb kick and buck, and it's the same way with humans sometimes."

On the way home from the store that night Bill felt somehow strangely comforted. He would try Uncle Jason's plan, for it could do no harm.

So the next time Amelia went to a dance, instead of staying home and brooding when she refused him as an escort, he bought a new suit of clothes, put a flower in his buttonhole and appeared at the dance himself. He made it a point to introduce any man she didn't know and did all he could to help her have a good time, but he was careful not to hang around her very much himself.

Amelia was puzzled—she shook her curly head and laughed and danced and flirted, but inside a peculiar uneasiness crept into her being. Bill had never treated her that way before—what could he mean? He was as pleasant as ever, yet so different; somehow far away and impersonal. What could he mean. When he called the following evening she would ask him.

But he didn't call—nor the next evening, nor the next, nor the next, and it was a week before she saw him again. One whole week of absolute torture. Amelia refused to eat, she couldn't sleep, her cheeks were pale, the neglected bobbed hair hung in forlorn little strings about her face. All the jauntiness gone—a most pathetic little girl with a breaking heart.

When Bill saw her his own heart jumped with sympathy and triumph, but he was master still of himself. He stood in the doorway and held out his arms.

"If you've had enough," he said, surprised at his own coolness, "you may come here."

Somehow she stumbled across the room and into his arms.

"What made you do it?" he asked at last.

"I—I don't know, but when I found out you didn't care whether I did it or not, somehow I just didn't want to do it any more."

And Bill Fleming smiled as he thought of Uncle Jason's lamb and the opposition.

SUCCESS OF RURAL FREE DELIVERY

The photograph shows rural free delivery carriers starting from Bloomington, Ill. Fully 50 per cent of the success of the rural free delivery mail service must be credited to the motor car. The horse is now a rare exception on the route and Old Dobbin is only resorted to in periods of mud embargo when the automobile cannot operate.

PUTTING CHAINS ON IS EASY JOB

Unless Method of Attaching Is Practiced a Bit, It Is Usually Awkward Process.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)
Very often it is only that the automobile owner is not sufficiently acquainted with the method of attaching chains that causes him to take a chance when the street or pavement is wet, and not put them on. Unless the method of attaching chains is practiced a bit, it is an awkward process, and as such an automobilist rather than spend a number of minutes fumbling with what he considers to be badly fitting attachments, will run along and may meet with a serious accident.

Practice Is Helpful.
The first couple of times that chains are put on it may take a considerable while to do it, and the motorist may even believe, although he has the indicated size for his tires, that the things are not the right dimension. A little practice, however, will make attaching chains a matter of only a moment or so, and this is time that any one can well afford to spend. In putting on chains it used to be thought necessary to jack up the wheels, but now, of course, it is realized that this is not needed.

The best way is to lay the chains over the wheel with the hook part toward the rear and tuck in the other end snugly underneath the wheel in front.

When both chains are in position thus, the car is started and run ahead only a foot or so. This pulls the part of the chain that was tucked in under the front wheel taut and leaves some extending beyond the point where the wheel touches the ground. It also tightens up the hook end.

Then it is only a simple matter of joining up the ends. Of course, it is suggested that the end on the inside of the wheel be hooked up first. This can be done by hand and the chains will fit as a rule tightly enough.

Learn to Put on Chains.
By way of conclusion it is earnestly recommended that a little time be given to learning how to put on chains. It was the experience of the writer that what at first was a laborious and bungling process became after a couple of trials a matter of seconds only, with the result that "at first drop of rain" the chains go on, as they should.

DRY BATTERY FAILS RAPIDLY
In Many Instances Real Reason is That They Are Not Protected From Moisture.

Car owners who use dry batteries often have occasion to lament the brief existence of these devices. In many cases the real reason why the dry batteries fail so rapidly is simply because they are not protected from moisture, dirt and excessive vibration. It is easy to make a stout wooden box, fitted with a cover and permanent terminal connections. The sides, bottom, ends and cover are made of hardwood three-eighths of an inch thick. The box may be made to accommodate as many cells as desired, either in single or double rows. The various parts of the box are screwed together and the inside is given an even coat of melted paraffin wax to render it moisture proof. The cover should be made to fit flush with the box sides.

LOUD CREAK GIVES WARNING
If Noise Is Noticed When Clutch Is Engaged It May Be Due to a Loose Wheel.

If a creak is noticed in a rear wheel when the clutch is engaged it may be due to a loose wheel, provided that the rear axle is of the semi-floating or three-fourths floating type, in which the wheel is not rigidly attached to the axle. In this type the wheels fit on the end of a tapered shaft and is locked tight by a large cottered nut. If the nut is not drawn up fully and the wheel is a trifle loose the axle will turn slightly when power is applied and give rise to an annoying creak. Though the wheel may seem tight upon inspection, an attempt to further tighten the nut may prove the contrary.—Automobile Digest.

GASOLINE TO BE PREFERRED

Better Than Kerosene for Washing Bearings, Cleaning Brakes and Running Board.

For all cleaning purposes, including washing of bearings, cleaning brakes and running boards, gasoline is always to be preferred to kerosene for the reason that it evaporates directly after completing the job. Gasoline, however, should not be used for external cleaning of the engine; and kerosene that is used for this purpose should only be applied when the power plant is cold.

Any opening in the valve tappet compartment when warm air can blow in is likely to result in drying the valve stems and making them stick. Such an opening, when found, can be plugged with felt.

A little scheme that makes it easier to back out of a driveway is to make a little notch in the under side of the steering wheel nearest the driver when the front wheels are in a straight-ahead position. If the driver starts backing straight and keeps the notch in the original position the car ought not to run off its course.

BURGLAR ALARM GUARDS CAR

Audible Signal Connected With Engine When Operated by Any Unauthorized Person.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a burglar alarm for an automobile, the invention of C. H. Summerhill of Penns Grove, N. J., says:
An object of the invention is the provision of an audible signal connected with the automobile engine

Automobile Burglar Alarm.

through which a fluid under pressure is adapted to pass when the engine is operated by an unauthorized person, whereby the fluid will operate the signal and warn the police and public of the unauthorized operation. Means are included for maintaining the connection between the engine and the signal until the authorized operator unlocks the same.

PLAN TO ADJUST GENERATOR

Good Way to Increase Flow of Current to Battery Is to Tighten the Fan Belt.

A good way to adjust a generator to increase the flow of the current to the battery is to tighten the adjustment of the fan belt which drives the generator. This will speed up the generator and thus increase the output. Another method is by adjusting the tension of the spring on the regulator armature. Increasing the pressure raises the charging rates and decreasing the pressure lowers it.—Automobile Digest.

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

Overheating burns up the oil, causing friction, loss of power and scored cylinders.

From 1900 to 1918 the number of automobiles in use in the United States increased 1,700 per cent.

When timing the ignition of an engine it is necessary to know when the piston reaches the top of the stroke.

Watch out for steam at radiator vent, as it indicates that the engine is overheating, a condition which may result in serious damage to the engine if not taken care of in time.

When driving at night a motorist should not stop to pick up a tire or any other article seen on the highway. This may be a trap and a gang of holdups may be hiding close by.

TURKEY GOBBLER'S SPEECH

Mr. Turkey Gobbler was in the barnyard. Near him stood Mrs. Turkey Gobbler as well as many other of his relatives and barnyard friends.

Almost Bursting With Pride.

"Listen to me, Turkeys," he said, "for today I wish to make a speech. Gobble, gobble, I have a great deal to say."

All the turkeys gathered around Mr. Turkey Gobbler, and after he had cleared his throat and looked at all the different animals to see if they were paying attention to him, he smiled his best turkey smile, and commenced:

"Ah friends," he said, "it is not well to boast, but a little real pride is all right. We turkeys can be justly proud."

"We are honored on the day of Thanksgiving. Now Porky Pig over yonder in the pen, is never honored in such a way. His family never receive the great and beautiful compliment we do."

"I often look at them, and I say to myself that it is no wonder they are always digging in the mud with their snouts, for they cannot hold up their heads and gobble with pride as we can. Sammy Sausage, Brother Bacon, Pinky Pig, Master Pink Pig, Miss Ham, Sir Percival Pork, Sir Benjamin Bacon, are all right in their way, but they are not animals of any importance. And they know it! That is why they grunt their way through life."

"Now, the ducks quack and swim and the geese cackle and make a great deal of noise and quarrel with their neighbors. That's because they're geese, of course! They don't know that creatures are far happier and have a far better time who are pleasant, and who enjoy their neighbors. But then of course you can't tell by their family name what they are like!"

Mr. Turkey Gobbler cleared his throat again and after seeing that all were still listening to him, he continued: "Billy Goat is all very well, but then, too, one can't tell by his family name that he doesn't amount to much. How glad I am our family name isn't that of Goat! He will eat almost anything. There is nothing superior about his diet, and by diet, I mean his food."

"Mr. Rooster crows and makes a great fuss, but he gets pretty frightened by an automobile horn! His grandfather or great grandfather said he made automobiles stop to see which way he was going, as he wasn't going to let them think their horns were of more importance than his crowing."

"He is of the opinion that roosters should go up and start some barnyards in the clouds just so as to show the airplanes they haven't the right to go wherever they please!"

"But he hasn't gone as yet because he hasn't heard of any Rooster airplane express going to the clouds."

"The hens cackle and make a great fuss, but they don't amount to so much. And the chickens aren't greater. But ah, we turkeys! It is not because I am almost bursting with pride, as Thanksgiving day comes around again, and I think of the honor that has been shown our family."

"Porky Pig's family will do for any old breakfast. Who has set aside a special day in the year when the special food at the banquet is bacon or pork or ham? No one, and I doubt if they ever will."

"Who has set aside a special day in the year when the special food at the banquet is chicken? No one. A chicken will do for any meal at all, though I think chickens are more favored than pigs."

Chickens do mostly for lunches and dinners and suppers, and bacon is mostly for breakfast. Where is the honor in being eaten by people who're hurrying off to school or business or who're still half-asleep and not in the least appreciative? As I say I do not wonder they grunt their way through life. But we have had a day set aside when we are the great and important feature of the occasion. And all those big words mean that we're the Thing about Thanksgiving day."

"People take time over Thanksgiving day dinner. They are not in any hurry. They do us great justice. They admire our family, too. They stop and say: "Look at that magnificent turkey! Ah, we are appreciated."
