MIND AND GAMES.

Learning to Play His Best in Moments of Strain Will Aid in After Life.

Success in football is supposed to depend upon a combination of mental agility and muscular strength and skill. But there is another factor, as in all games, and that is a mental assurance that one can do things and meet situations.

It is amazing how an athletic team will often go to pieces when something goes amiss. A long run on the football field by an opposing player, and the team may be mentally shaken and utterly unable to play its usual game. You often see the same thing in baseball, where one or two errors will completely rattle a team.

The superior player learns to control his mental attitude and play his usual game through such a strain. The time when an opposing team makes a particularly successful play, or his own team makes a particularly bad error, is a specially favorable time for a brilliant play by himself or his own mates. The unexpected success attained by his opponents is likely to give them an over confidence that will result in some serious blunder. They will probably do something that will create an opening for his own side, if he and his associates can but take it.

The majority of players are so rattled when anything goes wrong, that they do not perceive and are not able to take advantage of sudden openings caused by over confidence. But if they have that mental equilibrium they will realize that such an opportunity is likely to come to them and they will be ready for it.

The young man who has acquired ability to play his best game in moments of strain has a quality that is bound to help him wonderfully in after life. Many people relapse into ineffectiveness just at the moment when they need their best wits.

DEATHS.

ZEIGLER.—Mrs. Zeigler, wife of J. P. Zeigler, of Bellefonte, died at her home Saturday morning, aged sixty-three years. Interment was made at Pleasant Gap, Monday afternoon, the pastor of the Methodist church officiating. Mrs. Zeigler died from the effects of a complication of diseases. The husband and four sons—Charles and Clarence, Bellefonte, and Edgar, Juniata; and Homer, Clearfield—survive the deceased.

MEYER.—David Meyer died in the Gelsinger hospital to where he was taken for treatment from his home in Millville, Columbia county. Interment was made at Lock Haven, Wednesday. There survive the deceased one son, Horace, a professor in a New York City institution of learning. Mrs. Meyer died about two years ago.

The deceased was associated with Thomas G. Wilson in conducting the creamery at Centre Hall, some twenty years ago, and from here went to Millville to operate the milk station there. He followed the creamery business until his death, having had under his charge three stations at the time of his last illness.

GEPHART.—Mrs. Sara Heagy Gephart, wife of Rev. C. F. Gephart, a native of Millheim, and now stationed at Ickesburg, Perry county, died at the parsonage of the Lutheran church there. Mrs. Gephart was born at Baltimore, Cumberland county, January 14, 1859, being 73 years and 9 months of age. She was united in marriage with Rev. C. F. Gephart on November 23, 1882. To this union two children were born, a son, William Heagy Gephart, who died in early life, and Miss Helen Katherine.

Thompson Goes to West Point.

Birds' Nests Nourishing Food.

On Tawi-Tawi island of the Sulu archipelago live colonies of the little swallowlike swifts that make the edible birds' nests, so beloved of the Chinese. These birds have some sort of glands in their jaws that secrete a thick glue which they stick up against the wall as a swallow does mud, and the nest when completed looks like white glass, but is very light.

They are sold to the traders for their weight in Mexican silver, and it takes 17 nests to balance a dollar. They are supposed to be extremely nourishing and the broth is in demand for invalids.

After the "first chop" nests are collected the birds begin at once the construction of the second chop, but these are worth only about one-half the first chop. When these are knocked down the birds resort to moss with only enough glue to hold it together. These are allowed to remain and in them they raise their broods.

Hospital to Be Supported.

A rather spirited meeting of State College citizens was held Monday evening at which the question discussed was whether State College should establish a community hospital or whether it should lend its support to the Bellefonte institution and aid in putting over the $100,000 proposition recommended by the New York expert. After much discussion the question was decided by a margin of nine votes to give the Bellefonte hospital support.
