Hog Cholera Is More Prevalent

Many Farmers Failed to Immunize Herds—Incorrect Diagnoses Made.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Reports received from various sections of the country by the United States Department of Agriculture indicate that hog cholera is becoming more prevalent than in any year since the decline of the last extensive outbreak, which reached its height in 1914.

During the spring and early summer isolated outbreaks appeared here and there in various states. Owing to the comparative freedom of most states from cholera, the expense of procuring serum, virus and veterinary service, the high price of corn and the seemingly low price of hogs, many farmers failed to have their herds immunized last spring—as a consequence there is in the country an unusually large proportion of susceptible animals. Reports show that cholera has appeared recently in communities which have been free of this disease for 25 years. In many localities it gained considerable headway before hog raisers realized the real nature of the trouble. In too many instances the disease was diagnosed as hemorrhagic septicemia, influenza, indigestion or some other trouble than cholera.

Breeders Confused.

The large amount of advertising literature sent out by commercial concerns supplying hog remedies has had the effect of producing much doubt and confusion among swine growers in regard to the diseases of swine, and also considerable indecision among veterinary practitioners in some sections in regard to diagnosis. No doubt many herds in which "breaks" occurred this fall have been allowed to die from hog cholera because veterinary practitioners have been reluctant to diagnose cholera in herds which had previously received the simultaneous treatment. Bureau veterinarians who are co-operating with the state authorities and devoting their entire time to hog cholera work often have difficulty in convincing farmers that the disease from which their hogs are dying is hog cholera instead of worms, indigestion, hemorrhagic septicemia, "mixed infection," or some other disease concerning which they had obtained information from advertising literature.

Continues Great Menace.

Notwithstanding all that has been said of other swine diseases, hog cholera continues to be the greatest menace to the swine industry of this country and both hog producers and veterinary practitioners should keep this in mind. The active virus of cholera is present in the country continuously and it is not safe when one or more hogs in a herd get sick to delay from day to day in seeking assistance in the hope that the condition may disappear. Most of the losses this fall were due to the neglect of farmers to call their veterinarians in time to administer the preventive treatment before the infection had had time to reach all of the swine in the herd. Remember that the serum treatment is a preventive and not a cure. Unless hog owners and veterinary practitioners are on the alert and act promptly, the losses will be unusually heavy this winter.

Owners of Grade Herds Becoming Dissatisfied

It is very gratifying to know that owners of grade dairy herds are becoming dissatisfied with the use of just ordinary service bulls. Not only are they getting rid of scrub sires, but they are insisting that the herd bull must come from a dam with a good record. This is sound business judgment, for the use of a good bull, even in a grade dairy, means a sure future increase in herd production and will pay for the added cost of a good registered sire many times over. Bulls coming from a line of proven ancestors should be able to increase the future production of any grade herd. Farmers generally realize this fact and are going in stronger every year for herd sires which are backed with records as well as pedigrees.

Roofing Suggested for State Highways in Iowa

A serio-comic purpose seems to have been behind a bill in Iowa which proposed to roof the state highways. The sponsor of the bill supported it in a speech in which it was argued that the sun and rains of the warm months and the snow and cold of the winter months subjected the highways to such changes as made it physically impossible for them to stand the strain. It was suggested that the cost of the roofing would be less than the rebuilding of the roads. Not enough legislators were impressed and the measure died.

Immense Loss of Swine From Cholera Last Year

Approximately 4 per cent of the hogs on farms in the United States died of hog cholera last year. This estimate is made by the United States Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30. Losses were heaviest in Iowa, Nebraska, Indiana, Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, Georgia, Minnesota and South Dakota, in the order named. Each of these states lost more than 100,000 head of swine from the disease during the year.

Wintering of Pullets Requires Great Care

Culls Should Be Disposed of for Meat Purposes.

A poultryman must think about many things if he wishes to get his pullets in condition for a good total year's lay.

First, the pullets should be handled and graded into four classes—good, medium, poor and culls. The culls and poor birds should be sold for meat purposes. A pullet five months old, weighing less than three pounds, loose feathered and weak, is considered poor or a cull.

The next step is to grade and house the good and medium classes according to size and maturity rather than age. This will prevent a molt and will make feeding more efficient. Every bird should be treated with a good lice killer. A thorough cleaning and whitewashing should be given to all the pens. All leaks in the roof should be mended and the floors made dry. Straw should cover the floors to a depth of six inches. After the pullets are penned they should not be allowed out of doors until late in the spring.

Do not put more pullets in a pen than the roost and floor space can accommodate. Keep the house well open on the front, but have the sides and back tight against drafts. Use curtains on the windows when freezing weather begins.

Pullets require 12 pounds of scratch feed a day per hundred birds. This should be made of equal parts of cracked corn and wheat. If artificial lights are used, then 14 pounds of scratch feed should be fed each day. Mash should be available to the birds at all times. Do not allow the pullets to lay more than 50 per cent of normal production for the next few months.

Pure Bred Live Stock in Kentucky Is Progressing

Kentucky, long famous for its fine horses and blue-grass pastures, is not content with past laurels, but is making rapid strides in improving the quality of its food animals as well. According to Wayland Rhoads, field agent in animal husbandry of the Kentucky extension service, who recently visited the United States Department of Agriculture, scrub sires are being replaced rapidly with pure breeds. According to best estimates 16 per cent of the dairy bulls and 20 per cent of the beef bulls in the state are now pure bred and the proportion is increasing. A few years ago one-half of the east Kentucky mountain counties had no pure breeds at all, and the state was losing $15,000,000 a year due to scrub bulls and boars alone.

The reports of Mr. Rhoads are supported by figures obtained in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" movement, in which Kentucky now ranks third among all the states. A total of 1,508 farmers in Kentucky have signed written agreements that they will use pure bred sires exclusively for all classes of live stock kept and will follow methods leading to further improvement.

High Roosts Are Cause of Sore Feet of Fowls

The main cause of bumblefoot is the high roost. None of the large breeds should have to jump from roosts over two feet above the floor. Hens will always climb to the high roosts if they can, but they will invariably jump down if it is not extremely high.

Lighting on a hard floor, it is no wonder that their feet are bruised. The bruise can very easily be cured if the cause is removed, usually without any extra doctoring, but if the cause is not removed, the hens will be rendered permanently lame. Treat the injured hens with witchhazel and place them in a henhouse where they cannot fly down from high roosting places.

To Prevent Tuberculosis Clean Up All Grade Cows

"There is a tendency among dairymen," says C. S. Rhoads, dairy extension, University of Illinois, "and especially among the members of cow testing associations, to get started with pure breeds. This is a good practice and the good dairymen should be encouraged to do so. However, before the dairymen invest in pure breeds, it is wise to clean up the grade herds that the pure breeds are going into. It will be much easier to send a few grade cows to the butcher now than to send the good pure breeds later on. If you clean up now and demand clean animals when you buy, your losses from tuberculosis will be reduced to the minimum."

Large Cows Are Better Producers of Butterfat

The old question: "Are large cows better producers than small cows?" was recently investigated in Missouri. Results show plainly that size influences fat production very decidedly, another reason for growing helpers to their full inherited size.

In the test, Jerseys weighing from 625 to 1,125 pounds were used. Those whose average weight was 625 pounds produced an average of 340 pounds of fat. Those averaging 1,125 pounds produced 471 pounds. It was found that after a Jersey has reached 1,000 pounds in weight there is very little increase in production for corresponding increases in weight.

OLD TRADING MART OF LONDON STILL OPEN

Business Continues to Function After Thousand Years.

Every morning at five o'clock sharp the ringing of a bell awakens the oldest market in London, where for over a thousand years buying and selling have taken place.

Since three o'clock railway freight cars have been gathering outside Billingsgate market till by the time five o'clock comes there is scarcely a part of the road which is not occupied. They have brought fish and will wait to take fish away.

Unlicensed porters, with their stuffed caps and flattened bowlers, hang about by the dozen. They are not allowed inside the market—the market having its own porters—but wait outside for odd jobs.

A steady stream of men begins to surge into the market. Among the first comers are the Jews. They buy only the best fish and do not mind paying for it. Soon the building fills rapidly and before long every inch of the floor is doing service, and still there are more buyers to come.

Your small dealer with his fishbag rubs shoulders with well-to-do shopkeepers and buyers for hotels, restaurants and other large concerns. Porters, balancing piles of boxes on their quaint leathern hats, dart by you every second.

Here and there a nun moves serenely among the throng and you notice that a path always opens up before her. They are never refused fish, for the Billingsgate fishmonger is ever generous; you will go a long way to find a more good-hearted fellow.

The piled-up stands glisten silvery in the glare of the arc-lamps. There are hake, cod, skate, haddocks, soles, herrings, to say nothing of the crayfish and bags of shrimps. In fact, nearly every fish is here in its season.

You notice, too, that there are many boxes of Danish fish. Owing to the fact that the Danes, unlike the British, do not gut their fish, the foreign produce retunes the market in every fine condition—often alive—and consequently has a rapid sale. No fish, however, that is not absolutely fresh is allowed to leave the market. It is immediately condemned by the food inspector.

On the river side of the market there is a continuous flow of porters to and from the fish boats. These boats bring supplies straight from the fishing fleet in the North sea to the doors of the market.

At this entrance are six sloping platforms, called "forms." At the head of each form is a salesman, around whom gathers an eager crowd of buyers. As the porters bring in the boxes of fish they are placed on the form, bought, and slid down to a "heaver-up," who shouts out to a clerk in a box nearby the size of the fish, the name of the boat that caught it, and the price obtained. Every box that is sold is taken note of by a "checker," who stands at the side of the form.

All this business is accompanied by a continuous uproar of voices. The salesman, the buyers, and the heaver-up all vie with one another—the heaver-up being especially vocal. But what he says might be Greek, for all the visitor can understand of it.

A fluctuating market is Billingsgate, and it is a clever head that can gauge its ever-fickle balance.—London Answers.

"Mr." Was Once "Master."

"Master" was originally used as a title, but only in speaking of a man of high social rank or learning. It gradually was extended in application but has been superseded by "Mr."

The obscured pronunciation doubtless began while, the written form, "Master," was still commonly employed. Before the end of the Seventeenth century the abbreviation "Mr." (originally only one among many others used for the word in all applications) had come to be restricted to the use in which the pronunciation was obscured, and to be the only permitted mode of writing the word in that use. Thenceforward "Master" and "Mr." were practically two words.—Detroit News.

Electric Rain Alarm.

Falling rain is likely at any time to drive into a room and damage the floor, wallpaper and furnishings. One manufacturer has devised an electric rain alarm which will give warning as rain in any quantity falls into a room. The device consists of a box and a battery, a buzzer, a small electric light and a switchboard arrangement that holds what the maker calls a "raino-disc." The box is put on the window sill at night when the window is left open for ventilating purposes. The falling rain drops on the disc, switches on the current and throws both light and buzzer into circuit. The buzzer awakens the sleeper and the light shows which window needs attention.

Norfolk Woman's Good Health Due to Taking Hypo-Cod.

We believe that if every home in this country kept a bottle of the wonderful health builder, Hypo-Cod, always on hand and started taking it the minute they felt sick or worn out, that there would be a great deal of suffering eliminated. Over two million bottles of this great medicine have been sold and thousands and thousands of people brought back to health after taking it. The results are simply wonderful and if you are suffering we urge you to get a bottle of Hypo-Cod today from your druggist and take it until you are well. We believe that once you have it in your home that you will never be without it again. Mrs. E. V. Renn of 243 Franklin Ave., Norfolk, writes, "I was in a run-down condition, very thin, nervous and couldn't eat. My three-year-old baby was the same way and so was my boy of fourteen. None of us had any energy. One day our druggist recommended Hypo-Cod and I got a bottle. Right from the start it helped us. After taking several bottles I find myself well and hearty, my baby growing fat, and my boy in the best of health with one of the biggest appetites you ever saw. After what Hypo-Cod did for me and mine, I can't speak highly enough about it. All I can do is to urge all who are sick and run down to give it a trial."—Adv.

Too Much for Him. Bill wanted to slip out of barracks—officially—to see his girl, and he went to the sentry and stated the case.

"Well," said the sentry I'll be off duty when you come back, so you ought to have the password for tonight. It's "Idiosyncrasy."
