THE SANDMAN STORY

THREE WHITE KITTENS

MRS. TIGER PUSS looked fondly at her three kittens. "They are so pretty to go hunting in that dirty barn," she said. "I never saw whiter coats than theirs, though of course a nice tiger color like mine is better for every-day wear."

"No, my kittens shall not be brought up to work. They have plenty of milk and our mistress thinks they are the prettiest kittens she ever saw, so why should they soil their white fur going into the barn?"

"Better let them learn to hunt while they are young," said Mrs. Black Puss, who was passing with her family. "You may be sorry some day, for no one wants a kitten that will not hunt for mice."

"We Want Our Saucer of Milk," Wailed the Kittens.

"Oh, that may be true of some kittens," answered Mrs. Tiger Puss with a flirt of her tail, "but when they are as handsome as mine there will be no trouble in finding a good home for them. No, I shall not teach them to do a thing but wash their faces and keep their white coats smooth and clean."

So Mrs. Black Puss trotted off to the barn, followed by her family, and in a short time the little blackies were good mousers.

Mrs. Tiger did not mind catching mice for herself, but her kittens she kept spick and span and let them drink all the milk the mistress poured in the saucer every day.

But alas for Mrs. Tiger! One morning she came with her family to the door for her children's breakfast and the door was closed, and in spite of all the meow-ing she made and all the kittens as well, the door remained closed all day. The family had gone away for the summer and there was no milk to be had.

"Want my breakfast," wailed the three white kittens.

"You will have to catch mice," said Mrs. Tiger Puss sadly, but the three white kittens only wailed louder. "We want our saucer of milk."

"There are those three good-for-nothing kittens," said some one looking over the fence at the crying kittens. "They never catch a mouse, but just sit all day and wash their faces. Those black kittens were smart and they were all taken by the neighbors, but nobody wanted the white ones, though they are so handsome."

Poor Mrs. Tiger Puss meowed pitifully. She was afraid her children would starve, but they didn't, for when they were hungry enough to work they followed their mother to the barn and soon became good mousers, and when the family returned in the fall they were so grown up they did not know them.

"This has taught me a lesson," said Mrs. Tiger Puss. "The next family I have to bring up shall be taught to hunt as soon as they can run. Mrs. Black Puss was right. Beauty does not count for much unless the kittens are clever enough to get their own living, and nowadays a poor puss can never tell when she will be without a home, no matter how nice the family have been in the winter about feeding her."

Lillian Gish

Popular Lillian Gish, the "movie" star, was born in Springfield, Ohio, and later moved to Massillon, Ohio, where she passed her childhood days with her sister, Dorothy. While still in her teens Lillian made her debut in a Belasco production. While on a visit to the studio of a leading woman star she met a prominent producer and was given her first opportunity to enter the motion picture field, and her rise to stardom quickly followed.

MIRRORS

Mirrors, hung in the proper places, add materially in making a room more beautiful. In the first place, they increase the apparent size; as one author said, they "push out the walls," giving added depth.

Perhaps you, too, have been staring at the blank wall of a narrow hall as I have. Hang a mirror over a small console table and note the difference. The narrow passageway will assume almost the proportions of a room. This is especially true if the wall in question is opposite the opening into a room and, if there are windows opposite the wall on which you have hung your mirror, you are doubly fortunate as it will bring light into the room by giving the illusion of other windows.

Mirrors bring a feeling of balance to a room by their reflections. For example, take a room which has windows on one wall only. It is difficult to carry the color of the hangings to other parts of the room, yet if no attempt is made to do so, one side is "weighted" too heavily with color. A mirror, placed opposite the windows, will carry the color across and balance has been established.

The reflections from mirrors give glimpses of ornaments, pictures or a bit of color from the hangings in another room. I know of one house where a bird in a very lovely cage hangs in the dining room, and a mirror in the hall reflects this charming bit of form and color. Flowers, nodding before a mirror, are doubled beauty.

A mirror hung over the service table or buffet in the dining room is a happy treatment for the walls of a room that usually offers a problem in decoration. Any picture, except just the right one, is out of place in the dining room and a mirror is a solution.

The space over the mantel is a place where the right kind of mirror may be used to advantage.

The choice of mirrors is limited by price, where that has to be considered, but more especially by the type of room in which it is to be placed. The shops show many very good-looking and some very reasonably priced mirrors.

A pretty safe rule, in selecting mirrors, is to buy the simple ones. They fit in better with all types and kinds of rooms and do not assert themselves above everything else in the room.

You may have glass cut the desired size and shape and framed in picture molding and in this way get something more to your liking and possibly for less money. Or you may have a glass cut with a bevel and have two holes pierced in the glass and hang with silk cords. This makes an inexpensive and an attractive mirror, and as unframed mirrors are being used so much right now, it may be the best possible kind to buy.

The Why of Superstitions

WISHING BY STARS

Star light, star bright,
First star I've seen tonight:
Now I wish!

REPEAT this while looking at the first star that catches your eye in the evening skies, make your wish and the wish will be fulfilled. This is a common superstition among children and had its genesis on the plains of Shinar, in the days when the Chaldean priests watched the courses of the stars and read from them the destiny of men and empires. It is an offshoot of astrology; and how firm a hold astrology has taken on the superstitious inherent in mankind is evidenced by the fact that in the Middle Ages it was generally accepted as a true science and by the large number of fakirs who today make a living by its alleged practice.

Out of this idea of the relation of the stars to human destiny grew the idea that each man's fate was attached at birth to a particular star. "He was born under a lucky star," we still say. Napoleon was always talking about his "star"—half metaphorically, half with a belief in its actuality. To the modern child astrology is but a name and he has never heard of "his star." But lurking somewhere in his nature is the inherited superstition of the ages and that primitive urge—for the child's mind is the

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

APPRECIATION

THE most vivid remembrance of Adam Everyman's childhood was the melancholy occasion, the climax of many other such occasions, on which his mother, breaking down and weeping, had expressed the resentment of years of married life as she cried to his father, "If you only didn't always take things for granted!"

When Adam grew up he promised himself that at least he would never give his wife that cause for bitterness. So during his early married life he made a point of seeing and appreciating her efforts and sacrifices.

The years passed. When the eldest of their three children was fifteen, Adam realized that their actual income, though ample, was not equal to the income he had planned for this point when contemplating matrimony.

Then one evening he pursued what now was his custom, and retired immediately after dinner with his newspaper and his cigar to the room that was called his "den." Contrary to custom his wife followed him. Then he knew suddenly how much water had flowed under the bridge since they had been married. For to her new dress that she had made herself, and to the fact that this was the anniversary of their wedding—to all this he had been dully blind. He asked himself if a little appreciation might not help all round.

The next morning at the office Adam found his best salesman waiting for him. He made a point of mentioning an intelligent piece of business of the preceding month. The man looked pleased, but it was only later that Adam learned that this expression of appreciation had actually influenced the man not to accept the offer of a change from another firm. That same day Adam took pains to thank a customer for prompt payments, and the next morning a new order came in the mail. On another evening at home his small boy brought in a good report from school. When Adam put his pleasure into words his son looked surprised, but the next month there was a better report still. He became conscious above all of what life would have been to him without his home and of the impossibility of his home without his wife's dull daily routine. After that there was no question of his appreciation, and with appreciation it seemed as if a miracle had happened—so stimulating and successful was his work, so happy and full of pleasant possibilities his family.

The cause of the war among nations and of friction among individuals is egoism, and Adam Everyman had discovered one of the habits that save from egoism—the habit of appreciation.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

LILY

LILY may truthfully be said to be a flower name. Although effort has been made to concoct for it an intricate etymological history. It is best accounted for by the pure white flower with golden tongue, which gives its fragrance to the spring season.

Curiously, Lily has always been vaguely identified with Cecelia. Since the former was found difficult to trace, the Italian name Lillia was thought to be one of its progenitors. It was borne by Lillia Gonzaga in 1340, but was soon softened in Italy to Zillioia or Cecelia.

Lily is purely English and American. The Scotch have the form Lillias, made popular through Lillias Ruthven in 1557. A Scottish ballad is also sponsor for Lillian, but in recent years, the heroine of "Roswald and Lillian," who was queen of Naples, is generally referred to as Lily, and the significance of the flower is the accepted motive for its use.

The diamond is Lily's talismanic stone. It will protect her from danger and disease, and promises her victory over her enemies and the fulfillment of her ambitions. Saturday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number. The lily, of course, is her flower.

Spoiled the Dinner

An unexpected visit of some relatives threw a North side home into a flurry in an attempt to produce a very tempting dinner for the hungry guests. As the call for dinner came, the smallest member of the family ran to the dining room and seeing the chicken, which was the crowning glory of the feast, broke out with: "Oh, mother, is that the chicken that had the broken leg?"—Columbus Dispatch.
