

HOW THIS WOMAN GOT STRENGTH

Put Up 300 Quarts Fruit, 500 Glasses Jelly and Took Care of Four Children

Norwalk, Iowa.—"I have been meaning for some time to write and tell you how much good your medicine has done me. When I started to take it I was almost bed fast and would have been in bed all the time if I had had any one to care for my children. There was so much swelling and pain that I could hardly take a step. I took seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and found that so healing. I am not entirely well yet for I was in bad shape when I started your medicine, but I am so much better that I am not afraid to recommend it, and I think if I keep on taking it, it will cure me. I have done my work all alone this summer, caring for four children, and I canned 300 quarts of fruit and made 500 glasses of jelly, so you see I must be better. I feel pretty good all the time and I am glad to tell others about the medicine."—Mrs. C. J. WENNER-MARK, Box 141, Norwalk, Iowa.

Women can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve them from female troubles. For sale by druggists everywhere.

DAVIS ACCEPTS NOMINATION

G. O. P. Regime Is Subjected to Sharp Attack

THIRD TICKET IS IGNORED

Clarksburg Overflows With Visitors To Notification Ceremony; Rain Mars Programs—Outlines Problems.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—With "joyful confidence" in the outcome of the November election, John W. Davis accepted the Democratic nomination for President. The notification ceremonies were held in a torrent of rain, which drenched thousands in the audience.

A vigorous arraignment of the Republican administration and the pledge of "an honest, an impartial and a just government," constituted the theme of the address.

Half of his speech Mr. Davis devoted to a detailed and carefully-drawn indictment of the Republicans. The disclosures made by the various Congressional investigations figure large in the indictment.

Addressing his hearers as "the representatives of millions of Americans who are dissatisfied with existing conditions," Mr. Davis outlined "the problems of the hour" as follows:

"The allied forces of greed and dishonesty, of self seeking and partisanship, of prejudice and ignorance, threaten, today as they have rarely done before the perpetuity of our national ideals, traditions and institutions. Men are looking askance at one another; are mistrusting one another; are doubting each other's good will and honesty of purpose.

"The solidarity of the Great War has given way to a chaos of blocs and sections and classes and interests, each striving for its own advantage, careless of the welfare of the whole. Government itself, to which the humblest citizen has the right to turn with confident reliance in its even-handed justice, has fallen under the prevalent distrust.

Distrust is Abroad.

"There is abroad in the land a feeling too general to be ignored, too deep-seated for any trifling, that men in office can no longer be trusted to keep faith with those who send them there, and that the powers of Government are being exercised in the pursuit of personal gain instead of the common service.

"Out of this and because of it there has developed an alarming tendency to take the administration of the law out of the hands of constituted officials and to execute its processes through individuals or through organized societies, by methods little different from those of private revenge.

"A situation so threatening to the very foundations of the social order demands boldness in facing the causes which have brought it about, and tireless exertion in the effort to remove them.

"In 1920 we passed through a political campaign in which materialism was preached as a creed and selfishness as a national duty, and I say that it has brought corruption in high places, favoritism in legislation, division and discord in party councils, impotence in government and a hot struggle for profit and advantage which has bewildered us at home and humiliated us abroad.

"For all these things the party now in power cannot escape the responsibility that is its due. No repentance at the eleventh hour and no promise of reform can cancel half a line of the indelible facts.

Robbery Under Law.

"To pervert high office to personal gain is an offense detested by all honest men; but to use the power of legislation purposely to enrich one man or set of men at the expense of others is a robbery on a larger scale, though done under the forms of law.

"In the passage of the Fordney-Cumber tariff act, imposing the highest rates and duties in the tariff history of the nation, there was an unblushing return to the evil days of rewarding the party supporters."

Mr. Davis then took up the tax revision program supported by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and claimed for the Democrats full credit for the tax law passed by the last Congress. He referred pointedly to the disagreements between President Coolidge and the Republican Congress, and charged the Republicans "with division in council and impotence in action."

When a party "becomes a leaderless and incoherent mob," he asserted, "it must give way to some rival better fitted for the task of government."

Raps Foreign Policy.

In this connection, Mr. Davis took up the foreign policy of the Harding-Coolidge Administration, which, he charged, was evidence of "creeping paralysis." He mentioned the differences between the President and Congress over the World Court proposal, and pledged the Democrats to support the World Court idea. Secretary of the State Hughes, he said, had made a "confession of impotence."

Continuing, Mr. Davis said:

MAKING GOOD IN A SMALL TOWN

Real Stories About Real Girls

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN
(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

CANARY-CRAFT

THE craze for canaries is an excellent one for the up-and-coming small-town girl to capitalize.

"Because of lack of competition in this country, coupled with a constantly growing demand for the birds, it is easy to make good raising canaries," says a girl who has investigated the subject and, subsequently, has launched herself in this well-paying business. "There are few drawbacks to the business. The canary is a hardy pet, used to captivity, and able to survive with a minimum amount of care. Its breeding requires little capital to start, and the business can be expanded readily, as profits justify it."

The prospective canary producer should, if she is a novice, invest in the common canary of commerce. One male and two females will start a profitable flock.

The amateur breeder should find out all she can from books about breed, classification, varieties, mating care of nestlings and training of songsters. In general, the prime food requisite of canaries is canary seed which has been added a small quantity of rape seed and a little hemp. The birds should have opportunity for daily bathing.

During the incubating period, the breeder must take special care of the tiny eggs, as they are exceedingly fragile; and she must see that nothing worries or disturbs the mother bird while sitting. When the nestlings are a month old, a separate cage should be provided for them. The breeder should try to see that the "trainer," the bird who teaches the babies to sing, is a good songster, for upon his "training" depends the quality of the voices of the male birds and, consequently, the prices they will bring. Only the males are songsters.

The novice can hardly hope to compete with the big dealers and breeders. She may, however, easily market her birds by taking them to a pet-stock store in a city, or, if none is nearby, display them in a window in the busiest store in her own town. The immediate sales and the advertising for future sales will more than justify the rent of the window.

Or perhaps you would like to start a bird store? There are many such small establishments scattered over the country. Usually the trade is combined with a business in dogs, guinea pigs, white mice, goldfish, and so on. Sometimes the proprietor is required to act as surgeon and physician to domestic pets. All this is not so simple as starting with a few pairs of birds in your home, but it shows how by study and application, one can develop the business to any extent one desires.

"A political party, which is at best but human, may make honest mistakes; they can be forgiven. It may pass unwise laws; they can be repealed. It may, through honest error, set men to tasks beyond their power.

"I indict the Republican Party in its organized capacity for having shaken public confidence. I charge it with having exhibited deeper and more widespread corruption than any that this generation of Americans has been called upon to witness. I charge it with complacency in the face of that corruption and with ill will toward the effort of honest men to expose it.

"I charge it with gross favoritism to the privileged and with utter disregard of the unprivileged. I charge it with difference to world peace and with timidity in the conduct of our foreign affairs.

"I charge it with disorganization, division and incoherence, and on the record I shall ask the voters throughout the length and breadth of this land to pass judgment of condemnation, as a warning to all men who may aspire to public office, that dishonesty either in thought, word or deed, will not be tolerated in America. I cannot doubt what verdict they will render."

Having disposed of the Republican Party, Mr. Davis turned his attention to a thorough presentation of the Democratic virtues as he saw them. His first words were of the "progressive and the reactionary." He said:

"From my point of view, he only deserves to be called a progressive who cannot see a wrong persist without an effort to redress it, or a right denied without an effort to protect it; who feels a deep concern for the economic welfare of the United States, but realizes that the making of better men and better women is a matter greater still.

"Who thinks of every governmental policy first of all in its bearing upon human rights rather than upon material things; who believes profoundly in human equality and detests privilege in whatever form or in whatever disguise, and who finds the true test of success in the welfare of the many and not the prosperity and comfort of the few.

"The civic unity of America is not the dollar, but the individual man. All that goes to make better and happier and freer men and women is progress; all else is reaction. Progressives of this sort, though they may not care to use the name, nevertheless in their hearts are Democrats."

To the farmers of the United States, Mr. Davis said, the Democrats "promise not patronage, but such laws and administration of the laws as will enable them to prosper in their own right." The farmer, he said, in again attacking the Republican tariff, must buy "in a protected market and sell in a market open to the world."

Stand On Rates.

With reference to railroad rates, Mr. Davis asserted that the farmer was entitled "to demand an adequate service of transportation at reasonable rates." It was "quite as important to the railroads that the farmer should prosper, as it is to the farmer that the railroads should be adequately paid for the service that they render," he said.

Mr. Davis also advocated further reductions in the income tax. He pledged his own support to the budget system. The Democrats, he asserted, also stand "definitely pledged" to the enforcement of "all law." In this connection he added:

"To the enforcement of the law, and all the law, we stand definitely pledged. We shall enforce it as fearlessly against wealth that endeavors to restrain trade and create monopoly as against poverty that counterfeits the currency; as vigorously against ambition which seeks to climb into office through the corrupt use of money as against the lesser greed that robs the mails.

"Obedience to the law is the first duty of every good citizen, whether he be rich or whether he be poor; enforcement of the law against every violator, rich or poor, is the solemn obligation of every official."

Mr. Davis also urged the necessity for lifting "the burden of vast armaments which now weighs upon the world" and silencing "the recurring threat of war." He denied positively "that the League of Nations is a closed issue so far as we are concerned," and stated that, on the contrary, developments had shown it "destined more and more to become the bulwark of peace and order to mankind."

Although urging disarmament, Mr. Davis also declared himself in favor of maintaining "the means of adequate national defense until reason is permitted to take the place of force."

Denounces Bigotry.

Mr. Davis also took occasion to denounce "Bigotry, intolerance and race prejudice as alien to the spirit of America," and to state that, if elected, his appointments to office would be made without reference to "the race or creed of the appointee."

He declared, too, his determination to remain "free from pledge or promise to any living man." He concluded: "Neither the Democratic Party nor I as its leader have any favors for sale. We can make but one promise to all men alike, that of an honest, an impartial, and so far as human wisdom will permit, a just Government. To these things I pledge myself. In the struggle to secure them I invoke the support of all patriotic men and women to whom country is greater than party, honor more sacred than expediency and the right dearer than personal gain or all things else beside."

SUFFERED TWELVE YEARS WITH STOMACH TROUBLE

"My recovery has been a surprise to myself and all my friends," recently declared Jacob Ferdinand, R. F. D. 2, Fond Du Lac, Wis., a prominent citizen of this city, in relating his remarkable experience with Tanlac.

"The suffering I went through from stomach trouble for 12 or 13 years simply can't be described. In my efforts to find relief I spent over one thousand dollars, but kept getting worse instead of better. A large part of two years I was laid up in bed and for four months of that time I couldn't get up at all.

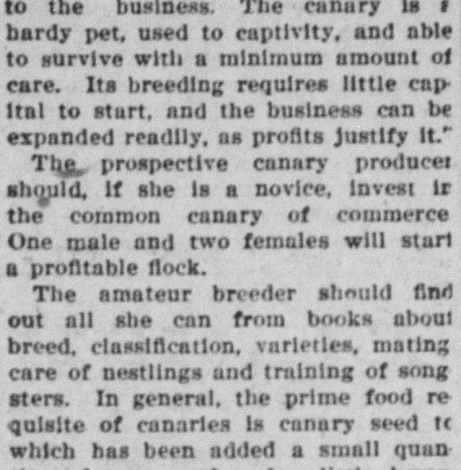

"Finally I sent my daughter for a bottle of Tanlac with the result that I found immediate relief, and seven bottles made a well and happy man of me. I will gladly talk to anyone personally and answer all letters regarding my experience with Tanlac. It proved a godsend to me."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

"SIDE LINES"

"SIDE LINES," to the small-town girl or woman, sometimes seem as alluring and as unattainable as the proverbial fruit that is just out of reach.

"But they're not!" insists one girl who manages to turn out numerous little painted cards, after a full day's work behind the counter. "It really rests me, after standing all day, to sit and make the little sub-dubberies; I think any girl can have a paying hobby."

Every girl who spends a stated number of hours every day at her typewriter, or behind her teacher's desk, or who has her life job taking care of a house, should have, if possible, an avocation that she can enjoy. Living in a small town is not a handicap. It is easier to make "pin money," in connection with one's regular duties, in a small place than in a larger one. There is less competition in a small town, and more leisure.

The small-town girl who doesn't know what she can make her "paying hobby" should take an inventory of her abilities. Can she make hats, do hemstitching, make buttons, paint postcards, make paper flowers, ribbon rosettes, silk lamp shades, quilts, house slippers, fancy handkerchiefs, or garters, lingerie pins, vases, beaded bags, door stops, wooden string holders, desk sets, directory covers, bird shelters and feed cups, toys?

One girl raised money making a new theater curtain for the village opera house, collecting the money for the advertisements painted on it from the town business men. Another embroiders collars and blouses. Still another makes a steady income painting and managing parties in her spare hours. There is money in butterfly gathering and mounting, making of soaps and toilet articles, making hair switches, poultry raising, gardening, running a rental library, and even in such a simple feat as advertising and selling one's old clothes.

In general, the article upon which the girl decides as her side line should be low in wholesale cost and simple in construction. It should be as nearly professional in appearance as possible. Lastly, where it is to be displayed or delivered in boxes, it should be carefully packed—for taking care of the article gives the subtle impression that the hobby of making it is a real "paying" one.
