HIGHER EDUCATION.
We note with interest the larger number of our young people who are seeking at our higher institutions of learning, a better equipment for life's business. Not many years ago one could easily count the number of students seeking a college education and all of us knew who they were. Today they are going from all walks of life in the hope of finding a preparation which will enable them to compete more successfully with life's problems. It speaks well for any community when there is a desire to excel upon the part of its people.

Mentally, morally and physically our young people as an entirety are more ambitious to carry on, and because of this, we believe there will be a broadening of vision, and a deepening of purpose in those who will be guiding our business affairs, and handling the management of our industries.

There is a better day ahead for this neighborhood, and we can all congratulate ourselves in this new spirit which has awakened our boys and girls. The quality of the citizens depends upon their viewpoint, and hence our delight in this manifestation, because of our interest in the progress and advancement of this county. Let us foster this desire upon the part of our young people to become worthwhile citizens.

If Mr. Coolidge should be elected we should have Mr. Hughes in the State Department for four years more. That is something that should give pause to thoughtful Republicans. President Wilson put a stop to "dollar diplomacy," but this Administration doesn't know any other diplomacy. It is keen for oil and tobacco and railway concessions, but it doesn't think it common sense to bother about humanity and philanthropy and the educational and religious plants that America has paid for in the Near East. They have been relegated to the tender mercies of the Angora Government, but where real money is involved the Administration will act energetically.

DEATHS.

NAGINEY.—Frank E. Naginey, a retired business man of Bellefonte and for many years president of the Pennsylvania State Funeral Directors' association, died early Monday after an illness of several weeks. He was prominently identified with various fraternal societies and civic organizations, and politically was identified with the Democratic party. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Naginey was reared in Millfin county, near Milroy. He went to Bellefonte when a young man and engaged in the undertaking and furniture business with the late W. R. Camp, finally taking over the business himself. He followed this business until a few years ago.

Death appears to have been due to the hardening of the arteries. He was aged about sixty-three years. A widow survives but no children.

REMER.—Rev. S. P. Remer died at his home in York, on Sunday. Interment will be made today (Thursday) at Lewisburg. He was presiding elder on this, the Lewisburg, district and is well known to many members of the Evangelical Church.

Aaronsburg Pastor Extended Call.
Rev. John S. Hollenbach, pastor of the Aaronsburg Reformed Charge, has been extended a unanimous call by the Manchester, Maryland, Reformed Charge. It is not known whether or not Rev. Hollenbach has accepted.

Cemetery Notice.
Persons having friends or relatives buried in the Egg Hill cemetery and are interested in having the cemetery cleaned and prepared for a new fence, are requested to meet there on Thursday, September 25th.—S. P. Hennigh.

A Humdinger Burgess.
On information of a citizen of his own town, Burgess Foust, of Mill Creek, Huntingdon county, who holds the dual role of Burgess and justice of the peace, was arrested, charged with violating the law relative to fining of delinquent motorists. All of the William Penn highway complaints have come from tourists who have been caught in what is known as the Mill Creek speed trap and which has been maintained by Burgess Foust with the aid of two watchful officers stationed at either end of the alleged speed trap. Burgess Foust is specifically charged with collecting fines and dividing with his two officers and keeping no record of the number of fines.

Penn State's 70th Year.
Opening one week later than usual, everything is in readiness for the beginning of the seventieth year at the Pennsylvania State College on Wednesday of next week, Sept. 24. A capacity enrollment of something over 3300 students is expected, including a freshman class of 1000, a full quota. The opening of a new dormitory on the campus, Varsity Hall, and the erection of over fifty private dwelling houses in the town during the past spring and summer, assures living accommodations for all students. Registration will start next Monday.

The usual number of changes have taken place on the faculty and several new faces will be seen on the administrative staff.

Drive Carefully.
The trouble with many of our boroughs is that the officials are unreasonable as to auto driving. There is no reason why any town should post signs "Speed limit 15 miles," because no driver will run at that rate. It is difficult to run through some towns at 15 miles an hour.

"There should be state laws regulating speed limit for all boroughs and cities. Imagine a New York policeman say, "Hurry on, speed her up," asking you to go 25 or 30 miles an hour or "get off the street; you're blocking traffic," and then a Burgess in a little town arrests you because you didn't drive 15 miles an hour. Ridiculous! "Drive carefully"—that should be the demand.

Millheim Schools Opened.
Millheim public schools were opened with appropriate exercises. All grades were grouped in the high school room and a program, consisting of vocal and instrumental music and talks by a director, teachers and heads of the various organizations and associations within the school, was rendered, after which the regular school work was taken up for the beginning of the 1924-25 term. A total of 130 scholars were enrolled, divided in the various grades as follows: High school—town students, 30; out-of-town students, 18, total, 48; grammar, 22; intermediate, 25; and primary, 35.

An exceptionally good sermon was listened to by Mr. and Mrs. William Lingle and daughter, Calvin Bodtort and wife, and Floyd Jordan, at the home of C. P. Ramer. The sermon was broadcasted by radio from a Presbyterian church in Pittsburgh.

Floyd T. Jordan purchased the motorcycle from Rufus Sharer the other day. Be careful with your neck, Floyd.

EVANS FAMILY REUNION.
The Old Stock Reared in Gregg Township—Lott Evans, Sr., Head of It.

The Evans family, living in various sections of Illinois and South Dakota, held a family reunion a short time ago at the Thorp cottage, Clarno, Illinois. The head of this family, was Lott Evans, Sr., who lived at what is known as the Evans homestead in Georges Valley, Gregg township, lately owned by the Finkles.

Three of the Lott Evans children—Lott, Jr., Mrs. Jane Evans Miller, and Thomas Evans—went West and it was their descendants together with some of those of Evan Evans (also a son of Lott Evans, Sr.) who met in reunion, the roll-call revealing thirty-eight present. The former officers were re-elected, namely: president, Mrs. Hattie Thorp; vice president, Mrs. Mary Beaudin.

The descendants of the Evan Evans family were, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Evans and daughter Mary, of Milwaukee; Mr. and Mrs. Glen Evans and daughters, Gwendolin and Virginia, Dr. and Mrs. Russell Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anderson and Mrs. Mary Beaudin, of Beloit, Illinois.

Descendants of Lott Evans responding to roll-call were, Mr. and Mrs. John Royer and son, Eber, of McConnell; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Leid and son Ralph, of Red Oak; Mrs. Ella Clarno and son Ted, Mrs. Myrtle Hoot and two sons, of Orangeville, Ill.

Descendants of Mrs. Jane Evans Miller were Mr. and Mrs. Archie Boob, of Orangeville, Ill.

Thomas Evans' descendants were: Susan Evans, of White, South Dakota; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Thorp and daughter, Nada, of Clarno, Illinois; Harry, Roland and Caroline Thorp, and Mrs. Hattie Thorp, of Monroe, Illinois.

10,000 Children Turned Out to Starve.
The workers in the American organization of the Near East went through a terrible ordeal in July. The committee had been embarrassed for some time by the fact that, on the strength of receiving large contributions, starving children, with absolutely no support, were taken into the orphanages. Trusting to a continuation of the generosity of the American people, the logical hope was that these children could be kept in the orphanages, where each one was taught a productive trade, until the time for undertaking their own support. This trust was misplaced; large contributions have not been continued. Children must be fed every day and the food must be paid for. This meant that when the money failed the men and women in charge were compelled to turn out some of the children. The fact is that in July of this year 10,000 children, not yet capable of self care, were sent away from the only shelter possible for them. Try to imagine, please, the feelings of the workers who did the turning out.

September and October are the most difficult months. Funds are very low, the fall campaigns have not begun to produce. This simply means that the tragedy of July will have to be repeated at no distant time if America is not aroused for the rescue.

Any money sent to Charles M. McCurdy, Bellefonte, Treasurer for Centre county Near East Relief, will be forwarded to Headquarters where it will be much appreciated at this crucial time.

FRENCH VILLAGE SENDS CROSS
To Be Placed in Centre County Grove As Memorial to Penna. Officers.

On the estate of Col. Theodore Davis Boal, at Boalsburg, stands a little grove of beautiful trees which has been set aside as a shrine for the Twenty-Eighth Division, the Pennsylvania National Guard unit of illustrious record in the World War.

The grove has been dedicated as a memorial to the outstanding heroes of the division. Two men have thus far been selected by the Twenty-Eighth Division Officers' association as worthy of being honored by this memorial. They are General Edward Sigerfoos, killed in action, and General Asher Miner, who was terribly wounded in action and who died recently at Wilkes-Barre.

There was an impressive ceremony at the little grove recently. A little group of officers who had served with General Sigerfoos and General Miner marched with bowed heads to the grove.

Brigadier General E. C. Shannon introduced General Edward Martin, who accepted the Cross of Mount Blainville, the little French village where General Sigerfoos was killed and General Miner wounded.

Jules Henri, secretary of the French embassy, at Washington, in presenting the cross to the officers of the Twenty-Eighth Division, represented the mayor of Blainville and the residents of the village. It was within sight of this cross that the officers honored at this ceremony fell in action, one dead and the other badly wounded.

"Meet the Wife."
"Meet the Wife," with Augusta Boylston in the part of a marriageable daughter, is a new comedy which answers the question, "What would you recommend us to see at the theatre?" and answers more than satisfactorily. Mark Byron, Inc., has given an admirable production and cast of players to this witty comedy written by Lynn Starling and staged by Bert French.

Augusta Boylston has never appeared to such advantage in career which has presented some admirable impersonations to her public. In comedy work she is at her best and as Gertrude Lennox in "Meet the Wife" her scenes with Donald Campbell as her husband and Messenger Bellis as her ex-husband, and with dainty Helen West as her daughter, she evokes a peal of laughter and is a source of unrestrained merriment to her audience. She makes Gertrude Lennox the empty headed, much decorated and intensely vain woman of the play a real woman, to be laughed at, pitied, and never emulated. The comedy is fast moving, contains witty dialogues, and excruciatingly funny complications and situations which keeps one's interest from first to final curtain without flagging, and with not a dull moment to mar an evening of whole some laughter and bright entertainment. "Meet the Wife" appears at the Moose Temple Theatre, Bellefonte, Tuesday night, September 23.

Although it is costing the people of this country $145,000 a day, the President cannot decide whether he could get more votes by reducing the sugar duty or by leaving it untouched. The Tariff Commission has reported that it ought to be reduced. The beet sugar men don't want their profits curtailed. Mr. Clem Shaver enumerates 12 men very prominently connected with the sugar trade who were in the convention that nominated Coolidge. Among them are the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and the present chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means, who took the leading part in framing the present tariff. They legislated the money of the consumers of the country into their own pockets. There's $145,000
