Mrs. Lee Suffered From All These Troubles, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well

Terre Haute, Indiana.—"I was weak and run-down and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time and dizzy, had no appetite and could not sleep. I tried different medicines for a year but they did not help me. Then my husband saw the ad. for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers and he made me take it. I regained my strength and never felt better in my life. It completely restored me to health. I had practically no suffering when my baby boy was born and he is very strong and healthy. I know that the Vegetable Compound is the best medicine a woman can take before and after childbirth for health and strength. I would be willing to answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Wm. J. Lee, Route E, Box 648, Terre Haute, Indiana.

NEW DRY BILL AGREED UPON

State Prohibition Forces Unite Upon Measure.

WATER TREATY SIGNED

Insures Adequate Supply From Delaware For Cities in Three States. Road Enabling Bill Passes Second Reading in Senate.

Harrisburg, Pa. — Differences of opinion between Governor Pinchot and the Anti-Saloon League over provisions of an administration bill designed to control breweries and distilleries in the state were adjusted at a lengthy conference in the executive office. As a result of the agreement the general assembly will be asked to pass what has been termed the "united dry bill," a measure that is supposed to have the indorsement of all the anti-liquor agencies in the commonwealth. At the time of its presentation the governor purposes appearing before a joint session of the legislature to tell the story of law enforcement in the state.

While a number of organizations were represented at the meeting with the governor, friction existed only between Mr. Pinchot and the spokesman of the Anti-Saloon League, Dr. Homer Tope, state superintendent, representing this organization. In the end both sides gave ground and a bill was outlined that met with the approval of all the dry leaders.

Provides System of Permits.

The measure will provide for a system of permits and periodic inspection of the breweries and the distilleries. By this bill, the administration hopes to check the flow of illicit alcohol and at the same time curb the output of high-powered beer.

Three state officials are to be vested with power to issue permits for the operation of a distillery or a brewery. These, it is said, will be the secretary of the commonwealth, the secretary of agriculture and the attorney general. They will act as a board to pass upon all applicants for permits or licenses.

Under a bill introduced by Senator Salus, of Philadelphia, banks in that city could establish branch banks within its limits.

The bill providing for construction of a new Eastern Penitentiary and carrying an appropriation of $2,500,000 for the work was passed on its first reading by the senate. The measure was sponsored by Senator Dutz, Philadelphia.

Friends of the Pinchot administration were exercised over the action of the senate in committing the $50,000,000 state highway road loan enabling act to the committee on appropriations after it had passed second reading.

This measure, which is sponsored by Senator Buckman, of Bucks county, had been reported favorably by the committee on highways, of which he is chairman. There was a report that the senate opponents of the state administration contemplated the offering of an amendment which would provide for an allotment of this money so that but a limited amount would be available for expenditure during Governor Pinchot's remaining two years in office.

Water Treaty Signed.

A treaty involving the ultimate expenditure of $500,000,000 in the next 100 years to insure an adequate water supply for New York city, Philadelphia and other cities in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania is signed by the Delaware River Treaty Commissioners, members of the Pennsylvania commission announced. The treaty meeting was held in the Lotus Club, New York, with the commissioners from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York taking part.

Operations of the treaty also is expected to eliminate future water shortages in New Jersey. Dams and other improvements will permit the regulation of the Delaware's flow, doing away with floods that have caused considerable loss of property.

Under the agreement each state will be enabled to get about 1,000,000,000 gallons of water daily from the Delaware for municipal purposes.

The treaty is the result of 18 months' work on the part of the eight commissioners appointed by the governors of the three states following action by their legislatures in 1923. It was unanimously agreed upon and will be filed with the secretary of state of each state, accompanied by a report recommending its adoption by the several legislatures and by congress.

A bill repealing the anthracite coal tax will be introduced in the legislature by Senator Heaton, of Schuylkill county. This tax has been on the statute books since the session of 1921. It calls for a levy of one and one-half per cent of the price of coal at the mines. Probably no tax law ever passed created more opposition outside the state than the anthracite impost. In New England the protesting went so far that some large consumers began to use coal imported from Wales. The tax was attacked in the courts, including the U. S. supreme court, but it weathered the storm.

THE SANDMAN STORY

MR. FOX, MR. COON, MR. DOG AND JIMMY SKUNK

MR. COON and Mr. Fox knew that Mr. Dog was very curious—He was always looking into places and nosing about where they thought he had no business to be.

"Why he does not stay at home. I can't see," said Mr. Fox as they talked it over one day. "He has plenty to do hunting rats in the barn and watching the house. Now why he should come all the way into our woods and poke about is more than I can tell."

"I have a notion, Racey, that some one should teach that inquisitive Mr. Dog a lesson. If only we could get him to poke about in some place where he would get his nose bitten or scratched, or something, he would stay at home afterward, perhaps, and mind his own affairs."

Just then they saw Jimmy Skunk meandering along, and Mr. Fox slapped his sides and began to laugh. "I have it, Racey," he said. "We will lead Mr. Dog to the home of Jimmy Skunk. He is young and I doubt if he ever saw one of Jimmy's family. Let's watch and see where Jimmy lives and then we will find Mr. Dog."

"That's all right for you, Mr. Fox," replied Mr. Coon. "You can run faster than I and you know that unless there is a tree nearby I might get caught. I am going to run up the first tree I come to and stay there."

"Oh, you are a frailty cat!" said Mr. Fox. "Come along, Racey, and have some fun with Mr. Dog."

The Appleton Family

Mr. Lysander John Appleton
Mrs. Lysander John Appleton
Miss Daysey Mayme Appleton
Master Chauncey Devere Appleton

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON has always had a dim notion that this is what happens every night when he turns the corner in reaching home. "There comes father," Mrs. Lysander John will say. "Now Chauncey Devere, you are his favorite, so you ask him if we can have a new carpet for the parlor. If he refuses, kick and scream. Daysey Mayme, you needn't ask him outright for new curtains, but you can tell about the kind other women have in their parlors, and how they were ashamed to ask any of the delegates to the bankers' convention to call on you because the parlor curtains are so shabby, and if you finally marry a poor man it will be his fault. If he refuses, I will look reproachfully at him, and we will all go out together to spend the evening, and treat him as if he didn't belong to the family. If he grants your requests, this might be a good time to ask for a new piano, and a new set of china."

Daysey Mayme Appleton is always talking of "going all to pieces," as if she were a piece of fragile china, and someone had thrown her against a rock wall.

Mrs. Lysander John Appleton and Daysey Mayme were preparing for a party. "We will lay covers for ten."

said Daysey Mayme. That night when the dinner was ready, Lysander John and Chauncey Devere failed to appear. "We thought," said a message that came by special delivery, "that if you are going to make up beds for ten, we'd better sleep downtown."

The religious instruction that has been pounded the most unceasingly into Chauncey Devere's head is that when the preacher is there for a meal he must bow his head as if accustomed to a blessing three times a day. (© by George Matthew Adams.)

But as Mr. Coon could not be persuaded, Mr. Fox ran off alone to see where Jimmy lived, and then he ran up to the farm so Mr. Dog could get sight at him and chase him.

It all worked out as Mr. Fox had planned it until he let Mr. Dog see him, and then Mr. Fox's plan did not work just as he had expected, though he led Mr. Dog straight to the doorway of Jimmy Skunk's home.

Jimmy was sitting outside in the sun, and when Mr. Fox came bounding along with Mr. Dog at his heels Jimmy was frightened and angry, as well. He didn't care whether it was Mr. Fox or Mr. Dog who disturbed him. Just to make sure, he punished both as they dashed past by sprinkling them with his smelly fluid, which he carries for protection.

Mr. Dog did not go very far. He stopped and rubbed his nose and then dropped his tail and ran for home.

Mr. Coon up in the tree saw it all. "I guess he won't call me a frailty cat any more," he mused. "I am glad I had sense enough not to try to teach Mr. Dog any lessons. Mrs. Coon wouldn't have let me in the house with that odor on my coat."

It was a long time after that Mr. Coon and Mr. Fox met again. "Seen anything of Mr. Dog around here lately?" inquired Mr. Fox.

Mr. Coon replied that he hadn't since the day he saw him chasing Mr. Fox through the woods.

"Guess he got a lesson that day," said Mr. Fox boldly. "He won't care to run into Jimmy again, and he will stay away from here. We shan't be bothered with him again."

"I have not seen you since that day, either," Mr. Fox said. "Mr. Coon. 'Didn't you get a little of Jimmy's perfume on your coat as well as Mr. Dog?' I thought I saw you rolling in the dirt."

"Oh, I was just rolling over laughing at Mr. Dog the way he dropped his tail and ran home," said Mr. Fox. "And as Mr. Coon was holding his paw over his nose Mr. Fox suddenly remembered he had an important engagement and ran off down the path."

"I wonder if I shall ever get that smell out of my coat," he said. "How Jimmy Skunk can live in the house with himself is more than I know." (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Have You This Habit?

OLD FRIENDS

WHEN Peg's train gave her, after twenty years, a couple of hours to spend in the city where she had been brought up, she telegraphed three of her oldest friends to meet her at Port's, that famous old caterer's, for whose ices and frappe in her exile from the land of her birth she had so often sighed. They had all come in from the country on their receipt of Peg's message on that hot day, and they waited, Ann and Nan and Fan, and wondered if Peg's train had been late, for they had the big place to themselves except for a stranger years younger than they, at another table.

"I dare say that Peg isn't as quick in getting about as she used to be," suggested Nan.

"I hope she hasn't had a giddy turn, or anything of that sort," forboded Nan, who considered herself a digestive invalid, who lived in a social whirl, who never walked if she could ride, and who picked at her food.

"Perhaps she changed her mind," said Ann, who was neurotic, had no tastes of her own, never walked if she could ride, and was house-kept with a cook book and a treatise on dietetics.

Just then the stranger from across the room approached them: "Is it— are you by any chance—can this be?"

"Peg!" they all cried together, and made room for her at the table.

Then, when all the conventional questions had been asked and answered, Nan began: "My dear, how do you manage to look so—so active?"

"So blooming?" put in Fan.

"And so young?" ended Ann.

Peg hesitated for a moment and then she said: "I am active, and if I look blooming and young, as you say, it's for that reason. My husband and I walk ten miles in the country every Sunday."

"We believe in the habit of exercise," went on Peg, warning to her subject. "When there's skating, we're

Your Last Name

IS IT ELMER?

THE first of the Elmers, Edward, came to this country in 1631 on the "Lion," as one of the congregation of Rev. Thomas Hooker. He settled in Hartford, Conn., where he was killed by the Indians in 1675. One of Edward Elmer's grandsons, Rev. Daniel Elmer, was one of the three graduates from Yale for the year 1713. Horace Elmer, one of his descendants, was a naval officer prominent in the Spanish war.

The name was originally Aylmer, and one of the early members of the family was chief baron of the exchequer in 1535 in England. John Elmer was bishop of London in 1568 and tutor of Lady Jane Gray.

Applegate—This is really a corruption of Appiegarth, meaning apple orchard. It was the name borne by a parish in Dumfries, Scotland, and was derived as a surname from this place.

Bagley—This is an Irish and English name, and signified originally one living at a rising ground. Thus it is similar to the name Hill or Mount.

Noble—This is one of the many surnames that is derived from an adjective of personal description. Undoubtedly it was applied to one who was of noble appearance rather than because of nobility of rank.

Mulford—This is doubtless derived from Millford, meaning residence near a mill. It is sometimes spelled Mulford and sometimes with one "l".

The first of the name here was William Mulford of Kent, England, who settled in Salem, Mass., where he was living in 1647.

Timbuktu No Longer Difficult of Access

There was once a special meaning attached to Timbuktu. It was held to be the symbol of impossible and far-off places. There was even an expression dismaling to Timbuktu people whom one did not wish ever to see, says a contributor to the Christian Science Monitor.

But we must revise our ideas about Timbuktu; it has now been brought to our doors; its inaccessibility has vanished; there is no longer any mystery about it. Timbuktu has its time-table. M. Citroen has formed a company to transport tourists by rail from Paris to Marseilles, by sea from Marseilles to Algiers, across the Sahara in great caterpillar cars, and down the Niger in motor boats. Hotels with every modern comfort have been set up in the desert. All the point has gone out of exclaiming: "Go to Timbuktu!" for to go to Timbuktu is to undertake a pleasant and easy trip.
