For that Cough! KEMP'S BALSAM

Ice Age Return Unlikely
There are old-timers who will tell you that so far as the United States is concerned the winters are warmer than they used to be and that a climatic change is taking place. Dr. A. P. Coleman of the Royal Ontario museum in Toronto, has come forward with the further comforting statement that a return of an ice age is quite unlikely. Glacial periods of the past have been accounted for by rather definite physical changes that could be charted in advance if necessary.

There are some men who, if you agree with them, end the conversation right there.

How to build up your Weight

TO BE under weight often proves low fighting-power in the body. It often means you are minus nerve-power, minus red-cells in your blood minus health, minus vitality. It is serious to be minus, but the moment you increase the number of your red blood-cells, you begin to become plus. That's why S. S. S., since 1826, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women, a plus in their strength. Your body fills to the point of power, your flesh becomes firmer, the age lines that come from thinness disappear. You look younger, firmer, happier, and you feel it, too, all over your body. More red blood-cells! S. S. S. will build them.

S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

THE SANDMAN STORY

NATURE'S CARPET

OLD Mother Nature hopped out of her bed. She had overslept. Everything was so quiet she did not know her son March had gone until she heard the door close with a loud "bang."
"Goodness me!" exclaimed the dear old lady, "here it is almost springtime and I have not started that carpet. April cried her eyes almost out last year because it was not all finished before she came home and May will not smile her prettiest smile unless she has that carpet of green to walk upon."
"O dear! what shall I do? I can't find a thing I need to work with. I am so upset. It is no use, I'll have to get all the children up to help me or I never will get it finished."

"I Must Run Along and Begin to Lay My Carpet."

So out of their beds she called her children and they began to help old Mother Nature weave her new carpet.
April, May and June went to work with a will, but August with his hot temper declared he would not get up so early and work on something he cared little for. "It is almost worn out by the time I am up and ready to go out," he said. "What there is left is only fit to burn."

So he turned over in his soft warm bed and went to sleep while the others worked, and by the time March came lagging in tired out with his rioting the carpet was more than half finished.
"Mother Nature, you will let me have a bit of the green to walk on this year, won't you?" asked April with her eyes full of tears. I must have it or the few flowers I take up on the earth will not be worth looking at."
Mother Nature nodded her head. She was too busy to stop and every minute counted now, but May and June assured their sister she should have the carpet to walk on before her stay was half over.

Mother Nature had a hard time of it keeping on weaving green, and by and by when it was finished it was so beautiful that June clasped her hands with delight. "It will be just the thing to show off my roses. Mother Nature," she said. "If you had used any other color it would not have suited everybody. How did you happen to think of such a lovely shade?"
"I thought of each of my children and knew what would suit them all," answered Mother Nature with a kindly smile. "And now I must run along and begin to lay my carpet or April will come home with tears streaming down her face."
May and June pulled their brother August out of bed to look at the new carpet and when he saw the cool green shade Mother Nature had made it he, too, declared it beautiful. "But it will be all worn and raggedy when I go out, and July does not help it any with his fireworks and—"
"You stop that," snapped July jumping out of bed and then up came August's fiery temper and if May and June had not separated them no knowing what would have happened. But the sisters sent their hot tempered brothers back to their bed, where they slept until Mother Nature sent them up to the earth to do their work.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRDING KING

YOUR FUTURE HUSBAND

IN NEW ENGLAND they say that if a young woman looks into an unused well on the first of May she will see in the water below the face of her future husband. In Georgia any well will do, but the girl must look into it at exactly high noon of May 1 through a piece of smoked glass. In other sections it is recommended to hold a looking-glass over the mouth of the well and seek for the reflection of a face in the mirror. These are unimportant variations of the same superstition, which superstition dates back to the worship of Tammuz on the Babylonian plain and to the rites of those who "mourned Osiris dead" by the waters of the Nile; cults which, spreading over Europe, became mingled with and modified by indigenous mythologies of kindred significance. It was the definition of the principles of nature—a symbolizing of the yearly death and resurrection of vegetation as the death and resurrection of a god, nature worship.

In England, whence we inherit our May day observances, the festival of the revival of the god was fixed for May 1, the state of vegetation at that date making it an appropriate one. The resurrection of the god in his fecundating power made his festival a fitting time for "projects" concerning marriage. As Isis saw again her husband, Osiris, on the festival of his return to life, as Ashtoreth looked again upon Tammuz, her husband, at the festival of his resurrection, so the marriageable woman of today sees her husband (that is to be) on May day in the waters of a well. In water because in the cults of Tammuz and Osiris water was the visible sign of the fecundating god, and in a well because in the Egypt of Osiris and in those parts of Asia Minor where the cult of Tammuz originated the vivifying waters were seen sparsely or not at all, in the form of rain, but swelling streams and filling wells.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

PHYLLIS

PHYLLIS might be classed with the flower names, or more properly perhaps, the sylvan names, of which Sylvia and Laura and Daphne are classic examples.
Phyllis means "green bough." It comes from the Greek word phyllis, signifying green leaf or bough. The tragic legend associated with the origin of the name tells how Phyllis, a Thalian daimon, lured herself because her lover did not keep his promise of returning from the wars to marry her. She was changed into an almond tree, in somewhat the same manner that Daphne was transformed.

Domitian's nurse was called Phyllis and the name also became popular in Arcadian poetry. Like Sylvia, it was bestowed so frequently upon pretty rustic maidens that it came to be the generic term for young girls. Later it fell to the class of handmaids and English literature is replete with references to a "neat-handed Phyllis in the kitchen."
In modern times, the name has returned to its classic significance. Phyllis is given in baptism by those who have a fondness for fanciful names. Aside from its Grecian origin, it remains completely English, adopted now by America, of course. No other countries have granted it popularity, since it is impossible to elaborate or contract it.
The amethyst is the talismanic stone of Phyllis. It promises her steadfast friends, serenity, quick intelligence and checks indulgences of every sort.
Friday is her lucky day and 3 her lucky number. The primrose, signifying simplicity, is her flower.

AS TOLD BY Irvin S. Cobb

THE VOICE OF THE PURIST

IN THE National league formerly was an umpire who was a stickler for correct department on the diamond. In a game in which he officiated at the Polo grounds Chief Meyers, the Indian catcher for New York, came to bat. Certain of the Boston players sitting on their bench began to guff the brawny red man.

In an instant the umpire had left his place behind the catcher and was running toward the visitors' box.
"Cut out them personalities!" he ordered. "Cut out them personalities!"
As he turned away a high-pitched voice filtered out from the grand stand behind him, saying:
"Cut out them grammars!"

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

SUSIE TOTTLE

DOCTOR WILLIAM and his wife were dining out one evening when Mrs. William told the following tale:

Susie Tottle is a dear, and I have been fond of her all my life, and yet, when I heard of her engagement, I wondered at the temerity of Alexander Strong—for Alexander knew Susie and her ways as well as did I myself. Once when we were young, Susie's father and my father had each given as a generous check and told us to choose the place in this whole country we'd rather go to for a month's trip. That seemed to leave the easier part of the arrangement certainly to us. It didn't take long to choose California. We went together to an agent to buy our tickets and make our reservations. I didn't know Susie so well in those days. Otherwise I should have been discouraged when she asked the man if, in case we changed our minds, we might redeem our tickets. We had no sooner left the office, in fact than we began to change our minds! By the time we reached home, Florida had become our objective, and someone was sent down to stop proceedings to California, Alaska, Colorado, and Maine coast, followed each other in quick succession. And to this day the money for that trip reposes in my savings bank account. Do you wonder that I was skeptical about Susie Tottle's married happiness?

"Then I heard of her transformation. During the first month of her marriage, it seemed, Susie had ordered an evering cloak. It happened to arrive when her husband was home. Susie tried on the cloak and then as usual began to wonder about returning it for another.
"Positively no, my dear," said Alexander, "we're not going to start life that way." Susie kept the cloak. Alexander cured her indecision.

"But ever since," ended Mrs. William, "I have remembered the old Susie when an undecided persona holds up a whole theater line, or when an undecided patient monopolizes the new book shelf at the library, or when I see two persons held rooted in front of each other on the street unable to pass. Then it is all I can do to keep myself from telling them about Susie Tottle and her Jewly acquired habit, in moments of indecision, of DOING SOMETHING and sticking to it."

Scraps of Humor

NO TIME TO WASTE

A man who was known as a persistent shopper, but a very poor buyer, entered a meat emporium and intercepted the proprietor.
"How much," he asked, "are veal cutlets?"
"Umsteen cents a pound."
"How much are pork chops?"
"Two cents less," responded the butcher, "but please don't detain me unless you mean business, as I have waiting a couple of customers who want to talk turkey."—Exchange.

A Mean Advantage

"Gentlemen," said the chairman of a public banquet, "before I introduce the next speaker there will be a ten-minute recess, giving you all a chance to go out and stretch your legs."
"Who is the next speaker?" inquired a guest.
"Before answering that question I would rather wait until you come back," was the chairman's reply.

A Hurry-up Call!

"My boss says he can't come, after all," said the plumber's boy. "But as it was a 'hurry-up' call, he sent me."
"But I never sent for anyone," said the mistress of the house, rather puzzled.
"O, then," the boy concluded, "it must have been the folks as was here before you moved in."

He Knew His Audience

"You are always talking economy to the public,"
"I've got to take somebody into my confidence," answered Senator Sorghum. "There's no use talking economy to my family."—Washington Star.

Any Bug in a Storm

"Do you hear that?" asked the fair maid, as there came to their ears the sound of a heavy step. "It is father. Fly, sweetheart, fly!"
"You mean flee," corrected the lover.
"Just as you please—but this is no time for entomological distinctions."—Counter; Gentleman.

A GOOD JUMPER

First Bug—Mr. Grasshopper is a good jumper.
Second Bug—Yes, he jumped his board bill last night!

Trying

If at first you don't succeed, You should try some more— If too long this tip you heed, You become a bore.

A Poor Financier

He—We'll have to give up our intended Florida trip. My funds in the bank are too low.
She—Oh, John, why don't you keep your account in a bank that has plenty of money?

A Literal View

She—If Shakespeare were alive today we shouldn't consider him a very remarkable man.
He—Still, he would be, you know, for he'd be over 350 years old.
