DEATHS.

SMITH.—John Smith, well known in Centre and Clinton counties, died at his home at 129 Sylvan Terrace, Harrisburg, Sunday afternoon, at the age of eighty-two years. The deceased was a son of Dr. Charles and Rebecca (Treon) Smith, and was the last survivor of that family. For a number of years, during the early eighties, he lived at Penn Hall where he followed farming, and from there moved back to Nittany Valley, where he had previously lived. While at Lamar he engaged as a coal dealer, finally selling his business and handsome home there to locate in Harrisburg, where he died. He is survived by a wife, whose maiden name was Miss Lizzie Bair, of Rebersburg, and three daughters: Catharine Rebecca, wife of John F. Murphy, of Philadelphia; Nora, wife of D. R. Rumberger, Harrisburg; and Florence, wife of J. A. Steinger, also of Harrisburg, and four grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at the home Wednesday evening, services by the pastor of the deceased, and interment will be made this (Thursday) afternoon in the Heckman cemetery at Penn Hall. The funeral cortege will travel by auto and will reach the cemetery between twelve and one o'clock.

CAMPBELL.—David M. Campbell died at the home of his sister, Mrs. Anna Gilliland, on Friday evening after a brief illness. He was a son of Washington Campbell and all his life lived in Harris township, where during the days of his activity he was engaged in farming. He was long a member of the Grange and was the secretary of the Centre County Pomona Grange for a number of years. He married Miss Florence Marshall, but a few years later the devoted helpmate passed to the beyond. There were no children.

There survive the deceased a brother, Elmer Campbell, and two sisters: Mrs. James C. Gilliland, with whom he had his home of late years, and Mrs. Sarah Stine. His age was seventy-six years.

The funeral took place on Tuesday, Rev. Louis V. Barber, pastor of the Presbyterian church, who represented the faith of the deceased, being the officiating minister. Interment was made at the Banch cemetery.

FUGATE.—Dr. Stephen Fugate, one of the leading physicians of DuBois, died on Sunday morning following an illness of several months. He was born at Stormstown, in Half Moon Valley, Centre county, on February 6, 1851. When a young man he took up the reading of medicine under Dr. George L. Potter, of Bellefonte. In 1877 he received his medical degree from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, soon after taking up the practice of medicine at Port Matilda. In 1879 he returned to his alma mater for a post-graduate course. In 1883 he located at Reynoldsville and in 1894 moved to DuBois. He is survived by his wife, two sons, and one daughter. His wife was formerly Miss Ellen Weston, of Centre county.

Schreffler, Osceola Mills; and Wm. J. McMullen, Johnstown. She was a member of the United Brethren church.

FISHER.—John J. Fisher, a well-known citizen of west Ferguson township, died at the home of his son John near Pennsylvania Furnace, after an illness of but several hours. Death was caused by heart trouble. He was born at Pleasant Gap 78 years ago, and about a year ago came to the home of his son, John, to spend his declining years. He is survived by his third wife, thirteen children, 42 grandchildren, and 8 great grandchildren. He was a tiller of the soil until old age retired him, a kind father and husband, and a good neighbor. He was a member of the Evangelical church. Brief funeral services were held and interment was made in the Madisonburg cemetery. Rev. J. S. English officiating.

RIEGEL.—Mrs. Amelia Riegel, wife of John Riegel, died at her home at Johnsonburg following a brief illness. GRANGE NEWS.

Grange Plans Many Events for County—Pomona Grange Meeting, Penn State Grange Picnic and Plays.

Special features of interest to members of the Grange and their friends in Centre county include the Penn State Grange picnic at State College, June 6, the staging of three one-act plays at Centre Hall, Friday evening, May 22, and at Pine Grove Mills, on Thursday evening, May 28, and the Pomona Grange meeting at State College, Saturday evening, May 23.

Efforts are being made to make the Grange picnic at State College an all-county affair. Those in charge of arrangements announce that a fine recreational program will be staged and that one of the state officers of the Grange will be the chief speaker of the occasion. Early in the evening the Grangers and their families will sit down to a bountiful basket supper to which all will contribute edibles.

The plays to be given at Centre Hall and at Pine Grove Mills will be put on by players from the Penn State Grange. The local Granges at these places will cooperate with the Penn State Grange in the matter of arrangements for the plays. Receipts, it is understood, will be turned into the fund for the Grange Memorial girls' dormitory at State College.

For Better Mailing.

The Post Office Department is making an effort to induce patrons of the mail service to properly prepare mail of all classes before mailing it. This includes not only properly addressing it, but securely wrapping and tying, and placing on all mail the name and address of the sender.

The cost of taking care of mail improperly addressed or not addressed at all is appalling. In one city alone this expense is $500 daily.

Last year 21,000,000 letters went to the dead letter office, as did also 892,000 parcels, 109,000 letters go into the mail every year in perfectly blank envelopes, and as much as $5,000 in cash is removed in a single year from misdirected envelopes, and this in addition to $12,000 in postage stamps. But this is not all, for $3,000,000 in checks and drafts never reach their intended owners.

This could all be remedied if every person using the mails put his or her name and address on the upper left-hand corner of every piece of mail sent out. Every one knows his own address if not that of his correspondent.

Last Auction Sale.

On Saturday evening, at Meigs' store, Colyer, will be held the last auction sale of the present season. Everybody is cordially invited to be present and take advantage of the low prices. Ice cream will be on sale.

County Agent Tells How to Get Rid of the Cabbage Maggot.

This is a somewhat belated reminder that the cabbage maggot is a common pest of our farm gardens and means should be taken to prevent damage by it. This maggot is a larva of a small fly that usually visits our cabbage plants for egg laying shortly after the plants are set in the field. The warmer weather now at hand is favorable to maggot development, and no time should be lost in treating the early cabbage already planted and that about to be set in the field.

The material to use is a solution of corrosive sublimate (Bichloride of mercury), one ounce to eight gallons of water and dilute to the proper strength. Use earthen ware or wooden containers, as metal vessels will be eaten through. The material is a deadly poison so should be kept out of reach of children and stock, and all unused solution should be poured into the ground.

For the cabbage maggot put about the stem of each cabbage plant a small cupful of the solution within a week after the plants are set. Give a second treatment ten days later and preferably one or two more treatments following this at intervals of 10 days. Have the ground well cultivated about the plants so that the corrosive sublimate solution will sink in.

Early cauliflower is also likely to be infested and is treated in the same way as the cabbage.

Maggots often do much damage to the late cabbage and cauliflower seedlings before they are transplanted. These may be treated in the row in the same way as radishes, though many gardeners prefer to grow them in frames screened with cheese cloth to exclude the maggot fly. The late plants should be treated after they are set in the field in the same way as the early plants, giving at least two applications of the corrosive sublimate solution.

"All hands to the capstan," pulling in an early telephone cable. A tractor placed over the manhole is the newest method.

BETTER METHODS; BETTER SERVICE

WITH the best of modern equipment, more telephone lines in cable can be "pulled in" to the underground conduit plant today in 2 1/2 hours than could be done between sunrise and sunset fifteen years ago.

In the beginning, it was "all hands at the capstan." Then a pair of horses harnessed to the job. Next, a motor truck with winch and power take-off. Last, a tractor placed above the manhole.

Telephone construction, maintenance and operation are being advanced and speeded in a thousand and one such ways.

Invention and development from within are supplemented by constant search in outside fields.

An improved device weighing two pounds will often contribute more than one weighing two tons. A better soldering-iron, in the hands of an organization which solders fifteen million metal connections a year, counts big.

In every department of telephone work more ground is covered today than yesterday. Little of this work is seen by the public, except along the highways and on an occasional visit to a central office.

But the increasing volume of service, and the still faster increasing complexity it presents, is more than matched by the putting to work of countless creations of American telephone and mechanical genius.
