Putting the Hog on a Normal Basis

Many years of study and experiment have ended uncertainty as to what is best for the hog, says a recent report. In pork raising, as in building up any other source of profit on the farm, much can be learned through the experience of others.

The U. S. Government and Agricultural Colleges spend big sums each year at their experimental stations. Both the Government and the Agricultural Colleges issue literature which tells about these experiments in detail. Anyone interested can secure the literature without cost by writing the U. S. Department of Agriculture or such Agricultural Experimental Stations. The great value in Government bulletins lies in the fact that they are based on the results of observation and study by trained, experienced men and at an expense which makes it prohibitive for the farmer to make these experiments himself.

Generally speaking, hogs have a normal period of growth and development. Many raisers ship before the hogs are finished—others hold their hogs and feed them beyond the period that the herd would be most profitable for them. It is natural, with high feed prices, that the raiser is reluctant to hold his hogs any longer than absolutely necessary, even though the hog

GUERIN ACT QUESTIONED AS SOON AS IT IS SIGNED

Attorney General Doubts the Validity of New Law That May Save Many Slayers' Lives.

With the announcement of Governor Pinchot's action in approving the Guerin bill giving juries in cases of murder in the first degree the right to fix the penalty at either death or life imprisonment, there was made public an opinion of Attorney General Woodruff indicating a question as to the constitutionality of the act, but holding that this is for the Supreme Court rather than the Governor to decide.

The act, which becomes effective immediately, amends the old law which permitted no alternative to a sentence of execution upon conviction of murder in the first degree. The amended section provides that every person convicted of murder in the first degree shall be sentenced to death "or to undergo imprisonment for life at the discretion of the jury trying the case, which shall fix the penalty by its verdict," and the Court shall impose the sentence so fixed as in other cases. In cases of pleas of guilty the amended act provides that the Court, where it determines the crime to be murder in the first degree, "shall at its discretion impose the sentence of death or imprisonment for life."

The question arose from the fact that the new law amends an act of 1869 when the Attorney General pointed out, it was contended it should have amended an act of 1913, the claim being that the later act entirely repealed that of 1869 and that, therefore, the Guerin bill is an amendment of a void law and for that reason is itself void. The Attorney General pointed out that appeals are taken in nearly all cases of murder in the first degree, and he said, "if this act is void, the Courts will so hold and the old law will be and continue in effect."

After summarizing arguments for and against the bill, the Attorney General said: "It is believed that juries will give egregious cases of murder the death penalty as heretofore. Less egregious cases are generally returned as second degree murder, which carries a penalty of only 10 to 20 years with the probability of parole at the end of the minimum sentence of 10 years."

The discrepancy between life imprisonment without a parole and a parole after 10 years, he said, "is too great, and the jury should be relieved by allowing them to give life imprisonment for first degree cases when their appreciation and conception of any case will not permit the infliction of the death penalty." He set forth statistics which, he said, are overwhelmingly against the theory that capital punishment acts as a deterrent against murder.

No Increase in the Price of

Firestone
FULL-SIZE GUM-DIPPED
BALLOONS

The extra quality built in by the extra process of Gum-Dipping, the economy of these wonderful tires and the added mileage obtained from them during the past two years, has created such a large demand that over 75% of Firestone's mammoth production is now Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords.

This has greatly increased the total sales volume and the huge Firestone factories are now working on a 24-hour schedule to supply the demand.

This large volume, produced under the most economical tire manufacturing methods, permits Firestone to sell these extra-process Full-Size Balloons at no extra cost to car owners. And this in the face of greatly advanced cost for crude rubber brought about by the operation of the British Rubber Restriction Act.

Gum-Dipping means longer mileage—greater economy—at no extra cost to you!

Enjoy the safety, economy and comfort of Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords this summer. Let us equip your car now at low cost—with liberal allowance for your old tires.
