FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State College

Save Wheat from Hessian Fly.—On account of the recent dry spell, it is probable that the Hessian fly will emerge later than usual unless there is sufficient rain to loosen the ground. This makes a delay in planting still more necessary if the fly attacks are to be avoided. Safe dates are usually a week or two later than most farmers plant. The county agent has a list of localities and safe planting dates for each.

Can Vegetables for Winter.—How many vegetables have been canned for use during the winter? Very likely a large part of the canning supply depends upon the vegetables which will develop during September and early October, say gardening specialists of the Pennsylvania State College. These include late tomatoes, snap and lima beans, small beets and carrots, cauliflower, sweet corn, squash, and many greens, spinach especially.

Sells Milk Drinks.—Chocolate milk is opening up a new channel for the sale of dairy products. One member of the Columbia Cow Testing Association started a chocolate milk route early this year. Now he has a delivery of 700 to 1000 half-pint bottles daily. He caters to the restaurants and confectionery stores, as well as parks during the dancing season.
