Cape Is Featured on Mantle Frock

Some Are Cut on the Dress, While Others Can Be Detached.

The smart fabrics for the new tailored suits are tweeds, good English fabrics as men choose for their suits, and the new thin "frescos" of Meyer, with very frail stripes in gray or brown. Brown from the palest sand to the yellowish mustard appears in the majority of the new tweed fabrics. The simple coats, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune, which are to be worn on cool and rainy days instead of a tailored suit, receive a very charming character by the adding of the cape. This cape is the greatest competitor of the tailored suits and is also the typical accessory for the new tailored mantle—frocks which are usually carried out in soft and gay pastel colors. There are short, long, plaited or narrow capes, always harmonizing with the dress. Some are cut on the dress, others can be detached. The dress is very often a two-piece affair consisting of a skirt and a jumper which is buttoned in front.

Black satin also is a well-liked material for coats for summer wear. One with a short cape has a collar of ermine. It is cut on straight lines, broken by a belt, fastened with a fancy buckle.

The famous Chanel crepe frocks are appearing on the avenues of Paris in large numbers. Each seems more lovely and wearable than the last. Wine red, delicate beige, navy with royal blue and lacquer red are the favorite colors. Little scarves accompany many of these dresses and some of them have a discreet trimming of buttons to match. A bow on the shoulder or at the back of the corsage and another defining the wastline is used.

Marthe Regnier, that clever and remarkable actress whose talent has endeared her to many Americans, also has become a well-known modiste. Sports and day clothes are her specialty, and she is now launching a collection of dainty and simple summer frocks. She has riding habits, golf suits, tennis frocks and a white knish yachting dress with wide box plaits and a blue collar that is most attractive with its little pea jacket of the traditional blue cloth with brass buttons. Her "camping" outfit is certain to appeal to the woman who demands chic even when camping. It has amusing breeches and a very workman-like blue flannel shirt that would not look out of place in the remotest mountain village of the Far West.

The dinner jacket so popular this spring appears as part of a black tailored suit with a skirt whose front plaits are so arranged one might almost imagine it to be divided.

Although shirring has long been a favorite type of stitching with Chanel, she uses it this season in a manner that is entirely new, showing that every kind of sewing is capable of infinite variety in the hands of a genius.

Futuristic Designs on Footwear Fashionable

Futuristic designs on footwear are becoming more common in the collections of Parisian custom shoemakers, and for a double reason. First, the lead in this movement was taken by Perugia, and, second, owing to the ease with which futuristic or jazz patterns can be carried out in colored kid. It is reported from Cannes that futurism in footwear is also prevalent there and at other Riviera resorts.

Leather and color combinations in these futuristic shoes are as follows: Light beige kid quarter and suede vamp, which is covered with a geometrical pattern in various shades of beige and brown kid; silver and gold kid, with long triangles on the vamp; beige and woodland brown; black patent, with gold and red for the jazz design.

Chic Afternoon Frock; Scalloped Blouse; Cape

Here is a dainty afternoon frock of powder blue flat crepe with scalloped blouse and a cape of white crepe, which is embroidered with blue circles.

Sleeves Are Important in Gowns This Season

Sleeves are to play a very important role in all smart frocks and afternoon gowns this season. First you glance at the sleeves and then you see that the rest of the dress is exquisite, too. The full balloon sleeves are the most fascinating. They take you back to the peasant costumes and go with apron-skirts, gorgeous flares of color and gayly embroidered overeffects.

The balloon sleeve fits well over the shoulders and does not begin to bulge until it reaches the elbow, then it bursts forth in all its glory and finally tapers again, fitting into a tight band at the wrist. Buttons, gay bits of ribbon or silk tassels sometimes fasten it together. Most of the sleeves are of taffeta and chiffon combined with lace.

Another very popular type of sleeve, particularly on the strictly tailored frock, is just a long, tight sleeve with a big flare cuff. This cuff-sleeve is unusually smart with the choker-collared frock.

Cape frocks and gowns have the frilly, fussy sleeve. Crepe ninette, just a shade firmer than georgette, lends itself delightfully to both the dress and the sleeve. Sheer without being transparent, it is similar to crepe Elizabeth and crepe roma.

High Collars Are in Fashion This Spring

Are you wearing a high collar? Well, if not you will have to see about it, for high collars are distinctly in the race. They have an unmistakable look of smartness about them, too. When you see one you do not have to have it explained as style, for, somehow, with unerring regularity, it manages to explain itself. Some of them are very high, these for those with necks that demand the lines. Then others are no higher than an inch or two, and they manage to tie with long ends so that if that extraordinary confinement at the neck becomes too much for the wearer, then the collar can be opened and allowed to fall back picturesquely, too. Even the necks of the new sweaters are high and some of them tie about in a scarf-like manner with streamers allowed to fall away at the side.

Scallops are new on the edges of skirts or on the edges of various tiers that go to make up a skirt. They are decorative looking without interfering in any way with the prescribed simplicity that is the keynote of the modern costume.

Long-Skirted Evening Frocks Are in Picture

Long-skirted evening frocks have made their appearance. Both matrons and young misses are bursting forth in bouffant frocks of ankle length. Usually the frock is of taffeta with a semi-fitted bodice and very full skirt. The bodice is severely plain, whereas the skirt is trimmed with ruffles, scalloped edged, bordered in contrasting color or trimmed in gold or silver appliques. Hems are often uneven, either drooping at the sides or at the rear. One noticeably beautiful gown of crisp white taffeta had a deeply scalloped hem line bordered in a wide band of gold cloth. Long full sleeves gathered into wristbands were also of gold cloth. The bodice was snug and not extremely long waisted.

White is the predominating color for evening wear at present. Next in preference comes black. At formal gatherings one sees less red and green than formerly since brilliant colors are outnumbered by white, silver and black.

Even Prints Are Shaded
The vogue for shaded effects is reflected in the new prints, which show the same design in three different shadings on a single piece.

Wives and Husbands

In "Wives," by Gamaliel Bradford, the author discusses seven famous women made famous only by famous husbands. The women are Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, Mrs. Benedict Arnold, Theodosia Burr, Mrs. James Blaine, Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Mrs. Benjamin Butler, Mrs. James Madison. The author contends that each of these wives was the intellectual superior of her husband. What's the answer? Women prefer to submerge self in mate even if they can outshine him?

ATTRACTED BY BOOKLET

Read of Other Women Who Found Health

Brooklyn, New York.—Mrs. G. Hegmann of 35 Central Ave., was in a run-down condition and could not do her housework. She could not sleep at night. Her story is not an unusual one. Thousands of women find themselves in a similar condition at some time in their lives. "I found your advertisement in my letter box," wrote Mrs. Hegmann, "and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got relief." Mrs. Hegmann also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine and Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation, with good results. She says, "I am recommending your medicines to all I know who have symptoms the same as mine, and to others whom I think it will help. You may use my statement as a testimonial, and I will answer any letters sent to me by women who would like information regarding your medicines."

There are women in your state—perhaps in your town—who have written letters similar to this one telling how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them.

The Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass., will gladly furnish other women with these names upon request.
