The entire building covers a ground space of 41 ft. in depth and has a frontage on Penn Street of 43 ft. 8 inches and the deed conveys title to it and such land space as lies between the building and the public alley on the south.

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State College

Hogging Off Corn Pays—Hogging off corn is an economical way of putting gains on hogs. It saves the labor of husking and cribbing corn and the work of feeding. Cost account records kept last year by a successful Pennsylvania farmer revealed that the returns from hogged-off corn were three times the price of corn on the local market.

Know Your Vegetables—If you have kept notes on the behavior of certain varieties of vegetables this year you will know which ones to plant next year. Also consider the quality of the seed you had this year. Did it germinate well under the prevailing soil and weather conditions? Profit by this year's experience and get seeds that will germinate well and produce vegetables of fine quality and flavor, and also early ones.

Quality Influences Price.—Instances of a variation of from 18 to 30 cents in the price of eggs received by farmers often are noted at this time of year. Local market conditions and methods of selling frequently have an influence, but the quality of eggs produced is the chief cause of this difference in price. Small, dirty, old eggs will not command the price of large, clean, fresh eggs.

Achieves Good Results—Bull associations promote the rapid development of community breeding and increase the interest in better dairy cattle, say specialists at the Pennsylvania State College.

RECORD APPLE CROP 42,000,000 BARRELS.

Pennsylvania Apple Crop Estimated at 15,855,000 Bushels—Price Forced Below Cost of Marketing.

Bounteous nature played a low-down trick on Pennsylvania farmers in producing apples so abundantly this year that the price has been forced down below the cost of marketing them.

Not in recent years has there been anything like the apple crop that is now about ready for the consumer.

The department of agriculture estimates an output of something more than 42,000,000 barrels, about 9,000,000 barrels greater than last year's yield, which was well above the average.

The yield in Pennsylvania is estimated at approximately 15,855,000 bushels, an increase of more than 150 percent, over 1925.

Commercial producers have appealed to the federal department for assistance in marketing the crop at a price that at least will cover the cost of picking and handling, and the department declares it will do what it may, but has little hope that in the face of a staggering output anything of a practical nature can be accomplished.

Apples are further handicapped by an unprecedentedly large output of all sorts of fruit and berries, which have been obtainable at prices lower than usual. The result is that the demand for apples is perhaps below normal.

Unless consumption is materially increased, low prices are expected to prevail for the entire marketing period, making it inexpedient for many growers to pick and ship fruit.

Penn State Pleased With New Prexy

In the new president of the Pennsylvania State College, Dr. Ralph D. Hetzel, trustees of the institution feel that the college will have the services of a man who appreciates the viewpoint of rural community folks as well as that of residents of the industrial districts.

Born and raised in the small town of Merrill, Wisconsin, and trained as a lawyer at the University of Wisconsin, it was Dr. Hetzel's great record as organizer and director of the agricultural extension service at Oregon State College that drew him, at the age of 34, to the presidency of the University of New Hampshire. After nine years of successful administration there, he comes to Penn State in January with a background highly suited to the aims and service of a land grant college such as Penn State.

Dr. Hetzel's contacts with rural people in the middle west, on the Pacific coast and in New England, all associated with land grant college service, will doubtless be greatly beneficial to Pennsylvania rural communities that in the last fifteen years have felt the effects of county agent and other State College extension influences.

Pennsylvania has long been noted for its highly efficient agricultural extension service, and it stands out as one of the best organizations of its kind in the entire United States. The new Penn State President will therefore have opportunity to reach the rural communities in a manner that should be beneficial to both the farmers and the college. Students, faculty, alumni and trustees of Penn State are all enthusiastic with the acceptance by Dr. Hetzel of this responsible position.
