OIL COMPANY AGENT GETS INTO TROUBLE

He is Jailed On Embezzlement and Forgery Charges After Hearing Before 'Squire E. R. Hancock.'

In default of the $5,000 bail imposed John E. McGinnes, former agent in the Phillipsburg district for the Tri-State Oil Company, was committed to Bellefonte jail to await trial on the charge of embezzlement and forgery. McGinnes, who was apprehended in Philadelphia last week and taken to Phillipsburg by Nathan Lamoreaux, chief of police at Phillipsburg, who had a warrant for him, appeared for a hearing before 'Squire E. R. Hancock. The prosecutor was Thomas E. Cotton, treasurer of the Tri-State Company, a subsidiary of the Texaco interests. An examination of the books, Cotton charges, revealed McGinnes was short in his accounts, that he had made collections and failed to credit them and had also endorsed checks without authority. McGinnes came to Phillipsburg in the fall of 1925 and left town early in the summer this year. Cotton made information against McGinnes and a short time ago learned the man was located in Philadelphia. At the hearing he entered a plea of not guilty.

U. S. Destroyer Disguised for "Midnight Sun."

International politics threatened for a time to balk one of the big scenes in "The Midnight Sun." Universal Super-Jewel set to be screened at the Richelieu theatre, commencing Monday, with an all-star cast. The picture is considered the masterpiece of Dimitri Buchowetzki, who directed it.

In "The Midnight Sun" there is a thrilling scene in which a warship pursues a private yacht. On board the warship is a Russian Grand Duke while the yacht holds the persons of the premiere ballerina of the Imperial Russian Ballet and Russia's most powerful banker. The girl is desired by both the Grand Duke and the banker.

When the time arrived to "shoot" this particular scene, Universal asked the Navy Department for permission to use one of its warships on the Pacific Station. The Department had heard that the action of "The Midnight Sun" was laid in Russia. As this country is not on official speaking terms with the present Russian Government the Department hesitated about granting the request. However, when Universal assured the authorities that the period of the play is 1913 during the reign of the Czar, the request was readily granted.

One of the Navy's swiftest submarine chasers was placed at the disposal of the motion picture people—officers and crew—and for perhaps the first time in the history of the Navy, certain of its officers took "orders" from a civilian. For Buchowetzki, the director, was given complete authority during the time the chaser was being used for the picture. The director even went so far as to paint the number of the chaser from off its bow and paint its Russian name. In addition to this, for the sake of cinema art and accuracy, American "gobs" doffed the regulation blue or white and appeared dressed as sailors of the Czar's Navy.

Universal has given this picture an excellent cast. Do not miss seeing it.

A lock lever hit H. W. Frantz, an Earlstown farmer, over the eye and gave him a black eye that would make an elegant copy for a movie star.

Members of the local Red Cross will be published next week.

TEST LEGALITY OF CHURCH MERGER

Supreme Court Hears Argument on Fight Over Control of Albright College.

The Supreme Court last week heard argument on the contest over the merger of the Evangelical Association and the United Evangelical Church on an appeal in litigation involving control of Albright College, Myers-town, Luzerne county.

The Lebanon county Common Pleas Court, in quo warranto proceedings, ousted six trustees of the college, who were termed "usurpers" by opponents of the merger. The ousted trustees, E. E. Stauffer, W. S. Harris, H. H. Zaring, D. S. Kistler, George H. Leininger and B. F. Christ, asserted that they had been duly elected by the East Pennsylvania United Conference of the United Evangelical Church, the successor of the East Pennsylvania Conference of the United Evangelical Church. The Court below decided that the merger of the two denominations was invalid as affecting the East Pennsylvania Conference.

The ousted trustees appealed from the decision of the lower Court and before the Supreme Court counsel for the appellants argued that the appellees and others of the "small minority" which revolted from the church of which they are apart, have a perfect right to their own freedom of worship. They can form a separate organization if they wish, as they did in 1894, but they cannot overrule the decision of their own General Conference and of the majority members of their Annual Conference.

The reunion of the Mother Church, to which they were asked to subscribe, was not a diversion of their property to radical different purposes, and there was no attempt to "catastrophize" them into a different church, for the union was consummated only after 12 years of labor and sacrifice, of mutual concession and compromise and earnest prayer. The reunion of the two churches is of far more outreaching importance than a legal, ethical and religious standpoint than the mere selection of trustees of Albright College.

Counsel for the so-called minority presented argument averring that neither the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference of the United Evangelical Church nor any of the constituent congregations of the Annual Conference was ever lawfully merged with the Evangelical Church. Under the laws of the United Evangelical Church, it was contended, that only members of the constituent congregations have a right to vote on the question of the change of ecclesiastical relations and that no congregation in the 10 Annual Conferences was ever called upon to vote on the question or ever instructed any delegates to vote for them.

In conclusion counsel for the opponents of the merger declared that "should unity ever come, it will be by the free and spontaneous action of all, not brought by subtlety and a policy to compel whether the rest are willing or not."

Not only is the Albright College property concerned in the litigation, but it is said that the ownership of much other church property is involved.

NASH Great Events in Motor Car History. The 3 or 4 Bearing Crankshaft is now obsolete in Nash engineering practice. Here's something of real importance for every prospective buyer of a SIX to think about-- if you buy a new car now that still has the old-type crankshaft with only 3 or 4 bearings, what is going to happen to its resale value? Manufacturers who still cling to the 3 or 4 bearing crankshaft design know just as well as you do that the MODERN crankshaft has 7 bearings. And certainly with Nash setting the pace they are not likely to hold to the old style of design any longer than they are compelled to under their manufacturing conditions. The authority of Nash engineering submits to your own good judgment that the motor with a 3 or 4 bearing crankshaft cannot be called a truly modern type of motor. Hosterman's Garage Centre Hall, Pa.
