NEW RURAL LIGHT AND POWER ORDER ISSUED BY P. S. C.

Commission Issues Plan for Electrification Modifying Previous Requirements—Companies Must Meet Costs of Extensions.

City rates will be applicable to rural users of electric current who gain their service from rural extension lines under a modified order for rural electrification announced by the Public Service Commission. The order becomes effective April 1, and electric companies are required to file rural rates with the commission before the first of March.

In the order the companies are required to pay the cost of service line extensions. Each consumer will be assessed a minimum monthly charge based on a fixed percentage of extension costs.

By assisting in the extension construction consumers may reduce their minimum rates, which also would be further reduced with an increased number of consumers.

This order, which is of special interest locally, is the result of a series of conferences between representatives of various agricultural organizations and of the State's power industry. The order replaces a former order of the commission, to which both the farmers' organizations and power companies raised objections.

Under the new regulation companies are required to establish a schedule under which mixed power and lighting service would be available to rural consumers through one meter.

The commission said: "The actual effectiveness of the new order is dependent upon two elements equally important, namely, the rates filed by the companies and the actual demand for electric energy which can be ultimately developed in the rural area. A general order can not embrace these elements. Utilization of electric energy on the farm is the greater problem; its development depends upon education efforts. Consequently the new order is not the final answer to the rural extension problem."

D. R. Thomas Injured.

D. R. Thomas, aged 70, a well-known farmer and produce dealer of Stormstown, miraculously escaped death when a coal truck he was driving slid over a mountain embankment on the Port Matilda-Stormstown road and turned over, pinning the driver in the wreckage of the cab. Mr. Thomas had taken a load of produce from his truck farm to Phillipsburg and was returning with a load of coal. At Port Matilda he fell in the rear of a line of new automobiles which his son, Irvin Thomas, of Stormstown, had unloaded at the Port Matilda siding and was driving home. The new automobiles were not equipped with chains and while going up the steep mountain road, the wheels could not find traction and the cars started to slide backward.

The aged driver of the truck skidded and plunged over the bank turning completely over. Mr. Thomas was pinned in the cab. The exhaust pipe was severed, allowing the fumes from the still-running engine to escape in the cab.

It was necessary for the men who were piloting the new cars to remove the windshield of the truck before Mr. Thomas could be extricated from his perilous position. He received a gash under the left eye and suffered much from shock.

Acres of Penn State Wheat Increases Fast.

Pennsylvania 44, the famous wheat developed from a single head by Dr. C. F. Noll at the Pennsylvania Agricultural Experiment Station and introduced to farmers of the State in 1921 by the Pennsylvania State College, is now sown on one-third of the wheat acreage in Pennsylvania, cereal grain specialists of the College estimate.

Government surveys of wheat varieties and the acreage planted to each revealed no acreage planted to Pennsylvania 44 in 1919, of course, but 22.5 per cent of the wheat in the State seeded to that variety in 1924. During the past two years Pennsylvania 44 has increased rapidly in favor with the farmers so that now those who have watched its development feel that one-third of the 1,126,000 acres of wheat in the State can be estimated conservatively to be Pennsylvania 44.

Another recommended variety which has increased rapidly in popularity and use is Leap's Prolific, originated from five heads gathered in Virginia in 1901. Red Rock and Forward also are recommended varieties for Pennsylvania conditions. In 1924, these four recommended varieties occupied 61 per cent of the wheat acreage. Now they probably are seeded on 80 to 85 per cent of the wheat area.

Gifts to Temple University.

Announcement of a gift of $100,000 to the "Greater Temple University" fund from Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Philadelphia publisher, and another $50,000 from the family of Dr. Charles E. Boury, president of Temple University, was made Sunday by Ernest T. Trigg, chairman of the Philadelphia Citizens' Campaign Committee. These donations, Mr. Trigg declared, are the first received from private sources toward the fund, now under way, for the erection of a great "Temple of Learning" or new home for Temple University, a memorial to Dr. Russell H. Conwell and as a means for carrying out his plans for universal "democratic higher education."

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State College

Order Needed Supplies Now—Spray materials and fertilizers should be ordered early since delay of only a few days in the spring may be disastrous to the crop.

Start Sweet Peas.—Sweet peas can be started now in pots and planted out as 6-inch or 1-foot plants in April.

Separate Ram and Ewes—In order to avoid injury to the breeding ewes at this time of the year, it is an established practice among good shepherds to remove the ram from the flock.

Prepare Harness for Spring—Cleaning, repairing, and oiling the harnesses on days of bad weather should find a place on the calendar of farm operations. Brush or lightly scrape off all dirt and dead hair; then wash with sponge and saddle soap. After the harness is dry, oil well with neat's foot oil preferably.

Dry Cows Need Grain.—Cows to freshen in the spring should be fed well now and receive good care. If thin in flesh it will pay to feed grain liberally. Corn, oats, and wheat bran, fed in equal parts, make a good grain mixture if cows are not milking and if fed with a good quality of hay and silage, say dairy specialists of the Pennsylvania State College.

Feed Layers Alfalfa.—Alfalfa is one of the best vitamin-containing feeds for the Pennsylvania hen. When a high grade of alfalfa leaf meal can be obtained, the amount equal to 10 per cent of the mash mixture can be fed.

BUILDING LOT FOR SALE.—Located between the residence of the undersigned and the Logan House, on Main street, Centre Hall, being full width and full length and desirably located. It is one of a few lots on the main street in the southern section of the borough. This lot will be offered at public sale, Saturday, February 26, at 2 P. M., on the premises. ELIZABETH E. SHIRK, Centre Hall.

TRUCK FOR SALE.—Chevrolet half-ton truck, 1925 model, in good condition; new tires. A bargain.—Boozler's Garage, Centre Hall. 06*

FOR SALE—A 1 1/2 horse-power water motor, in good condition, is offered or sale. Motor was in use in Reporter office until electric motor was installed. Apply at this office.

BANK STOCK—One or more Shares of First National Bank stock will be purchased at a fair margin, if offered. Talk business only.—Inquire, The Centre Reporter Office.
