

TWO WOMEN FOUND HELP

Their Sickness Banished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Nina Matteson, Box 206, Oxford, N. Y., writes—"If it had not been for your medicine, I could not have done my work as I should have been done. Mother told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I had read in different papers what it had done for different women. She wanted me to try it, so my husband and I bought two bottles. Now I am feeling quite strong again."

Mrs. Ernest Fanguay of Adams, Mass., says she was ill for four years and could not sleep nights or go out on the street. She read about the Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking eight bottles she was able to do all her work and go anywhere and is quite herself again.

This dependable Vegetable Compound is a household word in thousands of homes. The fourth generation is now learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than half a century, this reliable medicine has been used by women with very satisfactory results. If the Vegetable Compound has helped other women, why shouldn't it help you?

A Man's Man

Abraham Lincoln has always been our favorite American statesman, but since learning from no less a historical authority than our Mr. McKee himself that James Madison did more than any of our great Americans to introduce and popularize long trousers to take the place of knee breeches, we feel, what with our legs and all, that perhaps we have underestimated this great man's service to his country.—Ohio State Journal.

The Sandman Story

IN THE AQUARIUM

"I AM going to tell you a story of the aquarium tonight," said the Sandman.

"The aquarium, you know, is the home of many members of the fish family. This is a big city aquarium I am now speaking about, though of course there are little aquariums, too."

"Yes," said Nancy, "for I call my fish bowl where my two gold fishes are an aquarium."

"Of course," agreed the Sandman.

"Well, in this big aquarium there have been many new arrivals, some sea robins, toad fish, a new pipe fish. The pipe fish daddies help the mothers carry the little pipe fish eggs about and are really very useful pipe fish daddies. Their heads are something like heads of sea horses and they are relatives of sea horses.

"Spider crabs have also been added later, and some lobsters and some puffers."

"There have been some new arrivals in the blue crab family and some fine young brown spotted lady crabs and spider crabs have arrived. "The spider crabs are so named because their long legs have a kind of mossy hair upon them which is something like a spider's web, though others say they look something like spiders and that is why they are

YOUR FAMILY DOCTOR

"FROM the sublime to the ridiculous" describes no greater transition than is found in some of our modern survivals, compared with their origins.

The doctor, for instance—where among the professions is there a calling more honored or more dignified? Yet it had its beginning in a state of slavery, the early doctor, or leech, as he was called, when all his were cured by blood letting—having been a serf or bound attendant in the households of great families. Hence the expression "family doctor."

Also the squeamishness, "ethics," or, as some people think, false pride of doctors in not liking to mention or discuss their fees as those rendering other service will name their price! This is said to be dying out in this country, at least, but it is quite familiar to all as a heritage of the profession. In England, for instance, no member of the Royal College of Physicians is permitted to sue a patient for the collection of a bill! This is considered a mark of dignity and superiority. Yet, as a matter of fact, it is a survival of the doctor's original humble status. For in early days he was not permitted to charge money for his services—only to accept with thanks such gifts of clothing and other necessities that were sent him by grateful and generous patients!

named, so you may take your choice here.

"But it is of the talk between two lobsters that I want to tell you about. "It was a great joke," said Louis Lobster, and how I did laugh in my lobster fashion when I first heard it. "Tell it to me," said Leon Lobster.

"You see," Louis Lobster continued, "some one wrote a story about lobsters. Now the only lobsters which had been seen by the one who made the pictures of the lobsters were lobsters—all ready boiled and ready to eat.

"Of course, such lobsters are red. "But the one making the pictures never thought that lobsters were any other color at all at any time.

"And so the lobsters in the pictures were painted red and they were supposed to be in the sea and were supposed to be adventuring lobsters, and not ones ready to eat.

"Wasn't that absurd? But at the same time, it was a little sad."

"It was perfectly absurd," said Leon, "but why sad?"

"Sad," said Louis, "to think how little some people know of lobsters."

"Now, here was some one with a great talent for painting and yet some one who knew nothing about lobsters!"

"It was so dreadfully ignorant. Almost as though one knew how to skip a rope but didn't know who discovered America!"

"Almost as ignorant as that."

"Almost," said Leon, "but not quite. Still it is strange to think how ignorant people can be of such important creatures as lobsters."

"So these two lobsters went on talking in the aquarium while the other fishes there looked their best for the visitors.

"And after a bit the fishes all sang the great aquarium song which goes like this:

Splash, splash, splash. We certainly cut a dash. We wear so many colors bright. We're not red as some of you think. We're of all sizes and all kinds. Some of us are really finds. Splash, splash, splash. We certainly cut a dash.

"And then the two lobsters sang this duet:

We're the lobsters and you must know That when we're alive and on the go, We're not red as some of you think. But we are green, just like green ink! We're only red when we're boiled to eat. When alive we wear green costumes so neat.

And please remember how we look When we haven't met the lobster cook! "And then once again all the fishes in the aquarium sang the great fish chorus which goes like this:

Hooray, hooray, hooray. We're splashing fishes gay! (Copyright.)

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

By JOSEPH KAYE

At Twenty-one: John D. Ryan Worked in a Small-Town General Store.

"AT TWENTY-ONE I was working as a clerk in a general store owned by my uncle in the copper district of Michigan. I worked there until I was twenty-five, then I went to Denver to look for other work.

"It was six months before I found employment to suit me—and I wasn't hard to suit, either. Then I got a job selling lubricating oil on the road. I traveled all over the Rocky mountain section, from Montana to Mexico. Of course it wasn't exactly a primrose path or rose-bed life, but I was not married then and it was easier for me than it would have been for most fellows, because my father was well-known among the mining people and, as miners move a good deal, I met friends of his all over and this helped me in my business.—John D. Ryan.

TODAY—Mr. Ryan is one of the most famous mining men in the country, as well as a notable financial figure. He was one of those instrumental in the development of the great Anaconda copper mine.

DO FISH DRINK WATER? The flesh of fish when analyzed shows water present in it. And so we think they often drink. Perhaps once every minute.

THE MISSION OF SORROW

IT IS from some vineyard of sorrowing experience that the best fruit of life is pressed. Had it not been for the death of Arthur Hallam and the broken heart of Tennyson, we would have had no "In Memoriam." At times the poet Robert Browning wrote with so great a sorrow in his heart that he could not see his pen for the thick darkness. In his dungeon cell Bunyan wrote his "Pilgrim's Progress." Dante in the loneliness of his exile journeys in a real experience from hell to heaven. For four long years the heart of Angelo suffers, during which time his crushed spirit is transformed into beautiful angels painted upon chapel walls. As the product of Luther's experience Germany got her Bible. Mozart wrote his Requiem suffering from a disease that was fast eating away his life. The beautiful music of "Blossom Time" is the product of the broken heart of Schubert. The exquisite poem, "O, Love That Will Not Let Me Go," was written by George Matheson as he was going blind.

Many attempts have been made to escape sorrow. "Drown your sorrow in the flowing bowl," are the last words of an old festival song. It is the way of the fool. Sorrow is not escaped by such a process; it only leads to despair at the last. Another attempt to escape sorrow is to become indifferent to it. Desire nothing and we shall not be disappointed. If one could remove from the heart all emotions one could perhaps live an impassive life. Human nature makes such an attitude of heart impossible. Another way of escaping sorrow is to deny it. This makes such a draft upon the imagination as to render it impracticable. The stern realities of our modern life will not stand for it. There is no escape from sorrow. The problem is not one of escape but of purpose. Sorrow is an angel of mercy sent to reveal the deep secrets of life. He who suffers becomes strong. Sorrow is a voice speaking messages of courage, hope and love, heard like the cry, "All's well"—in the darkness of the night—

All is well tho' faith and form Be sunder'd in the night of fear; We'll roar the storm to those that hear A deeper voice across the storm. (© 1927, Western Newspaper Union.)

Work and Bolshevism Not Closely United

Secretary Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor, was praising labor's repudiation of Bolshevism and Communism.

"Look at what the demagogues of Bolshevism and Communism," he said, "are doing in Europe. Look at what they're doing in China. I heard a story from China the other day. "A conservative old mandarin rose to address a Bolshevized crowd in Shanghai. His address began and ended like this:

"My brothers, you are working men!"

"Hurrah! Glory!"

"And being working men—"

"Hurrah! Glory!"

"You must work."
