Buck Deer Illegally Wounded.

A four-point buck was discovered by H. W. Dinges in his alfalfa field on Tuesday forenoon making such peculiar movements that he undertook to investigate. When approached, the buck faced Mr. Dinges, but the little animal looked so appealing that upon it being discovered that both his front legs had been shot off close to a point below the knees, no further advances were made. Mr. Dinges at once notified John Knarr, a local game protector, who went to the scene and dispatched the crippled buck. The carcass was dressed by Mr. Knarr and disposed of according to the direction of Mr. Mosler, the county game warden.

When London Trembled

The little earthquake experience along the east coast section of Canada a few months ago recalls to mind the report of an earthquake shock which was experienced in Great Britain, 344 years ago. "Burbage's men were playing at the Theater and the Curtain, in Shoreditch, April 6, 1589, when suddenly by 'God's admonition' there was an earthquake shock." The news distributors of the day—the ballad monger and Bond street merchant—got to work at once. "At the play-houses," it was said, "the people ran forth surprised with great astonishment, many being 'more crushed and bruised' from panic at the exit. And the enemies of the stage chimed in: Comme from the Plate, The house will fall so people say, The earth quakes, let us last away. This is the earliest known verse on an English earthquake.—Family Herald.

WHY LEAVE PENNSYLVANIA TO FARM ELSEWHERE?

Where Soil and Climate Make Possible the Production of Nearly Every Crop Produced Commercially.

"Why go to western Canada to farm?" asks Secretary of Agriculture C. G. Jordan, after viewing at a Pennsylvania fair, a beautiful exhibit showing the farming opportunities of far-off western Canada.

"Why leave Pennsylvania where farmers have the best markets in the world right at their front doors for a land 1500 to 2000 miles from markets?" "Why leave Pennsylvania—a State where soil and climate make possible the production of every crop produced commercially in the United States, except cotton, peanuts, rice, flaxseed, and citrus fruits, for a land where farmers must take a long chance every season by producing one or two cash crops?"

"Why leave Pennsylvania where farmers are producing more wheat per acre than is produced in Kansas and more corn per acre than in Iowa?" "Why leave Pennsylvania where improved farm land is available at a lower price than in most well-known agricultural areas?"

"The reason farmers and others go to western Canada and similar areas," says Secretary Jordan, "is because somebody is doing a lot of advertising and talking about the great opportunities out there."

"What Pennsylvania agriculture needs is more advertising, and more boosting just like that. We could go out to western Canada, advertise and tell those people about the real opportunities for good farmers in Pennsylvania and get just as many to come back here as have gone out there from this Commonwealth. "What Pennsylvania needs is a few real farm boosters in every community and there won't be many people lured by beautifully colored farm pictures and by glowing remarks to a farming section several thousand miles from dependable markets."

An Open Letter to the Editor From the President of General Motors LAST SPRING I wrote you that my belief in the country newspaper had led us in General Motors to decide to advertise our products together in the small-city press of the country. The returns from the series of the messages recently published have justified that faith; and we shall continue to advertise in your community through your newspaper this fall. It occurs to me, however, that some of your readers may be asking: "What is General Motors?" and "Why is General Motors?" These are fair questions and I should like to answer them as frankly as I can. General Motors was organized some years ago on the theory that a group of large companies, working together, could render a better service than they could separately. In this we simply applied to industry a principle that is as old as civilization as regards the human family and human progress. Original members of the General Motors family were Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Oakland and Oldsmobile, together with the Delco-Light Company and other well-known companies manufacturing automotive equipment. By joining together their resources, we were able to establish great Research Laboratories, a 1245-acre Proving Ground and the GMAC Plan of credit purchase; to effect vast economies in purchase and manufacture and distribution; to assure and maintain the quality of every product in the General Motors family. Has the General Motors family principle proved itself in practice? The best answer, I think, is to compare the Chevrolet, Buick, Cadillac, Oldsmobile and Oakland of today with the models of five or ten years ago. Then add Pontiac, a General Motors creation. Add LaSalle, another General Motors creation. And then consider how General Motors has developed these cars into a complete line, within which any family may find a suitable quality car at the price it plans to pay: "A Car for Every Purse and Purpose." Another example is Frigidaire, the electric refrigerator. General Motors had the resources to spend millions to develop a satisfactory refrigerator, and then to apply to its manufacture the same processes which have increased the utility and lowered the cost of the automobile. We believe that this record justifies General Motors as an economic institution. Its products are quality products, first of all. Their prices represent the economies of united effort passed on to the purchaser. In the last year one in each three automobiles chosen by the public has been a General Motors car. The service of Delco-Light electric plants has extended to more than a quarter million homes, while Frigidaire has become the world's largest selling convenience of its kind. We believe also that the values now offered in the current General Motors products (which are listed below) prove anew that "many minds are better than one" and that a family of companies, working together, can produce results which are decidedly in the public interest and of increasing benefit to the individual family. Very truly yours, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President General Motors Corporation Detroit, September 23, 1927 GENERAL MOTORS CHEVROLET · PONTIAC · OLDSMOBILE · OAKLAND · BUICK · LASALLE · CADILLAC FRIGIDAIRE—The Electric Refrigerator · DELCO-LIGHT—Electric Plants GMAC Plan of Time Payments
