Daniel Fohringer and Frank Hennigh will change locations about the first of April. Both are farmers, the former now living on the C. W. Swartz farm at Tusseyville. He purchased the Housman farm where Mr. Hennigh lives, and on doing so the latter leased from Mr. Swartz Van Meeker, who now lives on the J. C. Goodhart homestead, will locate in Brush Valley on the farm.

Among the young men to take up farming next spring in this locality are George Goodhart Franklin Sharer and Morris Bryan. The two named first were married during the past year. The former will move onto the Goodhart homestead, near Centre Hill, tenanted by Van Meeker, and owned by James C. Goodhart, the huckster. The other young man will locate on the James L. Decker farm, east of here, when the owner moves to the Harper farm which he acquired some time ago. Last season Mr. Decker handled both farms, but found it very inconvenient to do so, and finally concluded to put a tenant on the farm he so successfully tilled since his marriage a number of years ago. Morris Bryan will begin farming on the John H. Decker place, on which there only blooded stock is bred and grown.

LEON EMINGS INSTANTLY KILLED—HIT BY TRUCK

Tried to Overtake Truck, Was Overcome and Fell Under Wheels—Purely Accidental, Coroner's Jury Says.

A weak heart was probably indirectly responsible for Leon Emings falling under a truck and being instantly killed, on Saturday afternoon, at the Oak Hall Stone quarries. Mr. Emings lived at Lemont with Mrs. Jane Stambaugh, and had gone to Oak Hall quarries in search of employment. Ralph Hassinger, who was driving a large truck with crushed stone he intended taking to State College, and the unfortunate man had planned to go with the driver as far as his home. The truck was loaded and on its way before Mr. Emings was aware of it, and to accomplish his purpose he started to run to catch it. On reaching the heavily laden truck, it is thought, the man's heart failed from exertion. He fell to the ground and in such a manner as to be caught by one of the rear wheels which passed over his body. Death was almost instantaneous.

The county coroner was called, and a jury empaneled, whose verdict was that death was due to an unavoidable accident. Peter Knapp was an eye witness. Although entirely absolved from any responsibility for the loss of Emings' life, Mr. Hassinger, the young truck driver, was so much affected that he was unable to proceed as a driver.

Mr. Emings was a native of Brookville, Jefferson county, and has no relatives in this section. The remains were interred at Boalsburg.

He had been employed during the past summer at the State College course, and had been about Lemont and State College for twenty years. He was about fifty years of age.

TWO YOUTHS LOSE LIFE BY CARELESSLY HANDLING GUNS

Penn State Student Tests Workings of Pistol by Holding It to His Head—Hunter Discharges Gun While Seated in Car.

Edward M. Pearson, 19, of Landsdowne, near Philadelphia, a Pennsylvania State College sophomore chemistry student, died at the Centre County hospital, Bellefonte, on Wednesday from an accidental pistol wound through his head. With his chum, Edward F. O'Neill, of Johnstown, he had been examining his revolver in his room and found that the cylinder was not working. As O'Neill sat on the edge of his desk, Pearson pulled the weapon out of a drawer and exclaimed:

"Now we'll see if it works." It is said he thought it was not loaded, but one shell was in the chamber and the second time he pulled the trigger, as he jokingly held it to his head, the bullet crashed through one side of his head and out the other. The bullet narrowly missed O'Neill. Doctors took Pearson to the hospital at Bellefonte, but he died shortly after arrival without regaining consciousness.

Pearson was one of the best students in the school of chemistry. His room-mate, Clyde Herr, of Franklin, was at class at the time of the accident. Pearson was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pearson, No. 43 Lacrosse street, Landsdowne.

The second accidental death happened the day previous to that recorded above, when Leroy Chambers, of Island, about a mile from Lock Haven, eighteen-year-old son of Clair Chambers, was instantly killed on the Coudersport pike, a short distance from Leon's Den, near Haneyville, when a gun he was handling accidentally discharged. The bullet, a soft nosed one, buried itself in Chambers' eye and killed him instantly.

Chambers, with two companions, James Madden and his brother, Ora Madden, of Chatham's Run, was returning from a hunting trip. At a gas station along the pike the young men stopped to examine the lights on the car and while they were busy fixing them, Chambers was looking over the rifles which were on the back seat. He was warned to be careful as they were all loaded.

Lawrence Shoemaker, of Lockport, who has charge of the gas station, decided to come along to Lock Haven, with the boys in order to secure some dry clothing. He sat on the front seat with one of the Madden boys while the brother was with Chambers in the rear seat, and they had gone only about 500 yards when the accident occurred.

Chambers was holding the gun by the barrel and the stock was on the floor of the car. The weapon evidently was jarred, causing it to discharge.
