FARM CALENDAR.

Timely Reminders from The Pennsylvania State College.

CORNSTALKS HOUSE BORERS.—In cornstalks remaining on feed lots borers usually stay in them throughout the winter. Where the stalks are completely trampled under the surface of liquid manure or mud the borers are destroyed, but if any parts of the stalks remain protruding from the surface the borers take refuge in them and may survive.

WHEN ALFALFA IS SOWN.—If sown early in the spring, covering alfalfa seed seems no more necessary than for clover. The inoculating bacteria also seem able to withstand freezing and sunlight at this season, although the greater number of bacteria and the slight protection furnished by some system of soil inoculation is probably advantageous when the seed is not covered.

DRAIN WET SPOTS.—Spring is the time to locate wet spots that need draining. They show up at this time. Map out the drains and dig them when opportunity offers.

GET EARLY SAUCE.—Rhubarb may be obtained early in the season by planting headless barrels over a few plants. The barrels should be banked with fresh manure and the tops partially covered with glass.

CROP RESULTS prove the difference

"ALMOST without exception," says a local merchant, "the farmers in this section who use 'AA QUALITY' Fertilizers get successful crops and bank substantial profits." Why? Because, year in year out, even under adverse growing conditions, "AA QUALITY" Fertilizers grow bigger, better, more profitable crops.

Read the letters at the right. Scores of other farmers in this and neighboring counties say the same thing. Larger yields, better quality, earlier maturity, extra profits—obtained with "AA QUALITY" Fertilizers.

Actual crop results prove that there is a decided difference in fertilizers of the same chemical analysis. Chemical analysis does not fully disclose the sources from which the plant-food elements were derived, neither does it indicate the physical condition of the fertilizer—two very important factors affecting the crop-producing power.

"AA QUALITY" Fertilizers produce more profit for every dollar invested in fertilizer because of the infinite care used in selecting the materials from which the plant-food elements are derived; because these famous formulas are based upon a thorough knowledge of crop and soil conditions. Backed by over 60 years of successful crop production. Any farmer will tell you that "AA QUALITY" goods are famous for their splendid mechanical condition.

Read these letters from successful growers. Then plan to increase your own profits in 1928; insist on getting "AA QUALITY" Fertilizers from your dealer for use on your farm this season.

"AA QUALITY" FERTILIZERS
