Proposed Legislation.

The following bills were introduced in the House of Representatives, and if they become laws, will be felt locally:
 By Stover, Allegheny, giving Justices of the Peace, Magistrate or notary public power to issue hunting licenses at cost of 15 cents additional.
 By Voltz, Philadelphia, restricting issuance of automobile drivers' licenses to persons 21 years old or more, and requiring drivers of school buses to be 21; also requiring examination of drivers every three years by Department of Highways for defective eyesight.

By Wood, Lancaster, for a 50-50 payment by county and State of damages caused by construction over improvement of highways.
 By Turner, Delaware, granting borough Councilmen a salary, and fixing it at not more than $129 a year.
 By Davidson, Allegheny, raising non-residents' hunting licenses from $1 to $25 and permitting issuance of non-residents' small game hunting licenses. Penalty for non-residents who shoot restricted game would be increased from $40 to $75.

By Moore, Washington, fixing pay of judges of election, inspector and clerks at $7.50 a day, with the additional step-up rate, not to exceed $15, in all except cities of first class and counties of second class.
 By Davidson, Allegheny, reinstating horses and cattle over four years old as assessable for taxation for county purposes.
 By Baker, Union, to add the road starting at White Deer Furnace, Union county, and extending westward over the Sugar Valley road to Carroll, in Clinton county, to the State Highway system.

Fire Scare Tuesday Evening.
 Tuesday evening, about 7:00 o'clock, a fire alarm was given and in record time the hose carts from the north and south sections of town and a battery of Success fire extinguishers were at the T. L. Moore home where smoke was the evidence of fire. A thorough investigation was made before water or chemicals were applied, and it was finally discovered that a brick had become disintegrated at a point between the ceiling and floor over the kitchen, leaving a large volume of smoke through the opening to filter out between the weather-boarding and at the cornice. There was no fire damage, and the only destruction by the firemen was to loosen a section of weather-boarding, cut a hole through the attic floor and punch an opening through the plastering close to the chimney.
 Mr. and Mrs. Moore are very grateful to all who so promptly responded to the call for help.

Began Hatching.
 Three of the incubators in the Kerlin baby chick hatchery were partially filled on Monday for the initial hatch of the 1929 season. This will permit shipping about February 11th. More than twenty thousand eggs are now in incubation, which, of course, is only a small fractional part of the capacity of the mammoth machines.

TWO PAY WITH LIVES AT ROCKVIEW FOR MURDER

Pittsburgh Bandit and Slayer of Doylestown Druggist Executed Monday at Rockview.

Paul Jaworski, 32, notorious bandit and killer, paid with his life for the part he admitted playing in the death of seven men. He died as he had lived, a man without religion, going to the electric chair at Rockview Penitentiary on Monday morning unattended except by two guards.

Directly after Jaworski had been pronounced dead, Calvin D. James, 26, of Upper Darby, was strapped in the chair and paid the toll for having killed a Doylestown druggist.

Robert Elliott, official executioner for several States, threw the switch for both.
 Jaworski, a few hours before the execution, confessed to another murder, that of Jack Vagbinder, with whom he shot his way to freedom from the Allegheny county prison. Jaworski said he killed the other when he learned he was a drug addict and buried the body in the sands of Lake Erie, near the mouth of the Detroit River.

Jaworski was known in his younger days as Paul Pallas, a church choir singer. He was leader of the bathed mob of payroll robbers of the Pittsburgh district. At one time his gang mined a highway and blew an armored payroll car from the road.
 Awaiting sentence to death in the Allegheny county jail, Jaworski, in August, 1927, aided by a two-gang man, who met him in the visitors' cage, shot his way out. Two guards were wounded. For months Jaworski was in hiding. A Pittsburgh resident spotted him in a Cleveland restaurant. As police stepped into the doorway, Jaworski drew two guns. He killed one officer but was shot in the neck himself. This resulted in partial paralysis of one side.

Returned to Pittsburgh, Jaworski requested the Governor sign his death warrant quickly. Mrs. Katherine Logan, of Detroit, his sister, fought the case, claiming Paul was insane. The State Pardon Board refused a sanity hearing.
 His only concern was a continued magazine story he was reading. The final installment was to appear in February, and Paul said: "Gee, it's tough not to know how that thing ended."

The publisher of the magazine sent an advance copy of the periodical to the jail and Jaworski read his final chapter of the story the day before he was removed to the death house.
 Jaworski's escape from jail was dramatic. While in the visitor's cage, talking with his brother, Sam, Jaworski walked close to the bars. The outside man tossed him two guns, and produced two others. Jaworski then armed Jack Vagbinder, another murderer, and the trio shot their way out. Sam is now serving a long term.

James also was under indictment for the murder of two uncles of his wife. He had confessed to killing them in the fall of 1925.
 Every legal move possible was made to save James' life. The case was carried to the Supreme Court and the State Board of Pardons.

Accusations of inhuman treatment at the hands of the Reading State Police were made by James' counsel before the Pardon Board. He charged the condemned man had been beaten with a rubber hose and burned with a cigar lighter to extort a confession.
 James was arrested April 17, 1928, two days after Dunstan disappeared. He was held in the State Police barracks in Reading, and several days later led the police to appoint in a canal near Doylestown where Dunstan's body was found. There were five bullet wounds in the body.
 James admitted he was a bootlegger.

$29,686,214 in Dairy Products and Eggs Shipped Out of U. S.

Dairy products and eggs valued at $29,686,214 were exported from the United States in the year ending June 30, 1928, according to a statement on the export situation issued by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. Canned milk topped the list, with eggs second, cheese third and butter fourth. The principal export market for these products proved to be Cuba, which took two-fifths of the eggs shipped abroad and was next to the United Kingdom as a buyer of canned milk. Great Britain was the second largest customer for these products, with the Philippine Islands in third position. Mexico, Germany, China and Japan, Panama and Canada were the other markets which bought the surpluses of these products.
