THREE CITIZENS STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS

John D. Moore, Mrs. William H. Homan and William McWilliams.—Mr. Moore Died Tuesday Evening After Being Unconscious Five Days.

Three citizens of town were stricken with paralysis recently, one of them—John D. Moore—passing away Tuesday evening after having been unconscious since the stroke on Thursday evening. Mrs. William H. Homan and William McWilliams are improving.

Mr. Moore was stricken at the home of his son, T. L. Moore, where he had been living since the death of his wife a few weeks ago, on Thursday of last week. He at once became unconscious and never revived. He was aged about 78 years and was feeble before the attack.

Mrs. William H. Homan was stricken with the same disease about eight o'clock Sunday evening, a short time after returning to her home from a short auto ride. Her entire right side was paralyzed, and her speech was also affected. For a time she was unable to move her right hand or arm, but on Monday strength began to return, and gradual improvement continued until at this time (Wednesday morning) she is able to move her limbs, but to a very limited extent. There are, however, bright prospects for her recovery. Although Mrs. Homan had been receiving treatment for high blood pressure, her condition just prior to Sunday was regarded very good.

William McWilliams, mention of whose illness was noted in a previous issue, is gradually improving. With the use of a cane he is able to walk about in his room. And more, he is cheerful, fully expecting to recover. Mr. McWilliams is at home of a daughter, Mrs. Musser, at Rock Springs.

One of the strangest fish known to science is the hagfish, found in Monterey bay, California. This fish is blind, and yet is so voracious that other fish are not found in the same waters. How does it manage to find its food? To make up for the loss of sight, the hagfish possesses a keen sense of touch and an unknown chemical sense—or what seems to be an exaggerated sense of smell.

It has been noticed that when food is dropped into an aquarium where there is a hagfish, the fish instantly swims towards it. This fish, although blind, has rudimentary eye spots; they are not, however, in the least sensitive to light.

According to Dr. David Starr Jordan, the hagfish, which is purplish-blue in color, varies in size from about eighteen inches to two feet, and in general appearance rather resembles an eel.

Another peculiarity of this fish is that it has three hearts. Besides the main heart, it has, like the eel, one in the tail, and in addition to this another special heart for the portal system of veins.

Tibetan Village Holds Record for Dirtiness

Tibet is famous for many things, but few people know that the dirtiest place in the world is to be found in the land of the Lamas.

It is a village, Phari-jong by name, situated on a piece of rising ground in the center of a plain not many miles from Mount Chomohari, one of the finest mountains in Tibet. It stands over 14,000 feet above sea level, and is believed to be the highest place in continuous habitation in the world.

Phari consists of a fortress, surrounded by 200 hovels. Owing to the fact that everything which we would throw into our dustbin is there simply thrown out, these hovels are now below the level of the ground. Year by year the heaps of rubbish have grown, until the occupiers of the "hovels" have had to cut paths through them from their front doors to the road.

In spite of its "buried" look, however, Phari is one of the leading "market towns" of Tibet. There is a respectable bungalow in the village, kept up by the Indian government for the use of its representatives, and it was here that the last Mount Everest expedition arranged to stop when carrying out their exploration of the nearby mountain. Phari is also in postal and telegraph communication with India.

Odd Fish Found Only in California Waters

One of the strangest fish known to science is the hagfish, found in Monterey bay, California.

This fish is blind, and yet is so voracious that other fish are not found in the same waters. How does it manage to find its food? To make up for the loss of sight, the hagfish possesses a keen sense of touch and an unknown chemical sense—or what seems to be an exaggerated sense of smell.

Forensic Marathons

The longest forensic speech was that of Coleridge in the Tichborne trial, which lasted 26 days; and another lengthy one was the 11 days' performance of the attorney general in the Behring arbitration case. It may be safely said that, however long Sir John Simon took, some of the old school, like Erskine, Brougham and Russell, would have taken double the time. For their style was much more verbose, and judges were much more patient, several of them making a habit of taking a nap while the drowsy eloquence proceeded. Long tracts of evidence were read out, and once Pollock commenced to read 300 letters. After an hour or so the judge said: "Is it necessary, Mr. Pollock, to read all those letters?" "Absolutely," was the unblushing reply, "for I have never seen them before."—Manchester Guardian.

Days of Youth

"We are young only once," you often hear some person remark as an excuse for "hitting the pace."

True, we can be young but once, and the pleasures of youth must be crowded into that space of time.

But how long are we young? Some men are old at forty, while others are still young at sixty. It depends upon the pace they hit and the manner in which they hit it.

We can crowd a lot of work and pleasure into youth if we keep our hearts and our minds and our bodies clean. We can reduce the amount of both and shorten our youth by resorting to reckless dissipation.—Newcastle Courier.
