

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Mrs. Lizzie Jacobs, on Monday, was a guest at the home of her sister, Mrs. Ellen Stuart, in State College.

Mrs. Edward Sellers, formerly of Centre Hall, now of State College, has been ill and for a few days has been in a semi-conscious condition.

If you said it was Tuesday of next week Walter Hosterman was moving from his farm at Pottery Mills to State College, you were right.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. B. Auman, of Rebersburg, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Auman's sisters, Mrs. John Heckman and Miss Martha Boal, in town.

Rev. S. F. Greenhoe, who for the past two Sundays has been unable to fill his appointments on the charge, is anticipating doing so next Sunday.

The "Clover Club" will meet on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. W. A. Odenkirk. The program will have special features fitting for the time—Washington's birthday.

The "Senior Service" class of the Lutheran Sunday school was entertained at the home of one of its members, Mrs. E. E. Bailey, on Wednesday evening.

"Under Blue Skies" is the title of a four-act comedy drama to be presented in Grand Arcadia by the Ladies of the Golden Eagle, on Friday evening, March 15th.

George Reel, of Pine Grove Mills, one of the game wardens on the south side of Centre county, was in town on Sunday evening. His mission here is not known, but it is presumed he was not out for his health.

A number of mechanics and also a few laborers have been laid off from their work at State College. The suspension, the men are confident, is only temporary and that by March they and others will again be back to work.

In his sermon on Sunday, Rev. D. R. Keener, in the Lutheran church, where he filled the appointment for Rev. Greenhoe, he'd up two great Americans whose birthdays fall in this month—Washington and Lincoln—as models.

Joseph Swabb, who is located at Sharon, where for the past four years he has been engaged in cow testing work, is making preparations to start farming this spring on the Joseph K. Bitner farm at Farmers Mills, at present tenanted by J. Fred Slack.

J. Russell Reish, of Unionville, was a caller at this office on Friday. Mr. Reish is a public school teacher and for the past five years has taught in Union township, on indication that he is pleased with his location as well as that the school patrons are pleased with his services.

J. C. Lee, of Spring Mills, was in town on business on Friday evening. Besides his regular duties he has taken on the agency for the Mohawk radio, and has been successful in placing outfits in a number of Penna Valley homes, to the entire satisfaction of his buyers.

Ten thousand Chevrolet dealers in every part of the country, assisted by more than 20,000 salesmen, participated last week in National Demonstration Week, the result being that hundreds of thousands of persons experienced without obligation their first rides in the new Chevrolet, six.

Squire E. T. Jamison, of Spring Mills, was a brief caller here on Monday evening on his way home from Bellefonte. He was here in the interest of an assignee sale he will hold on March 5th, at which time the personal property of Elmer C. Lingle, one mile north of Penn Hall, will be sold.

The local K. G. E. lodge expects to hold an interesting session on Friday evening of this week when about ten new members will receive the first degree. Of this number five will be additions to the Millheim lodge, which lodge will have a good representation here, as will also Spring Mills and Madisonburg. Following the business session, refreshments will be served.

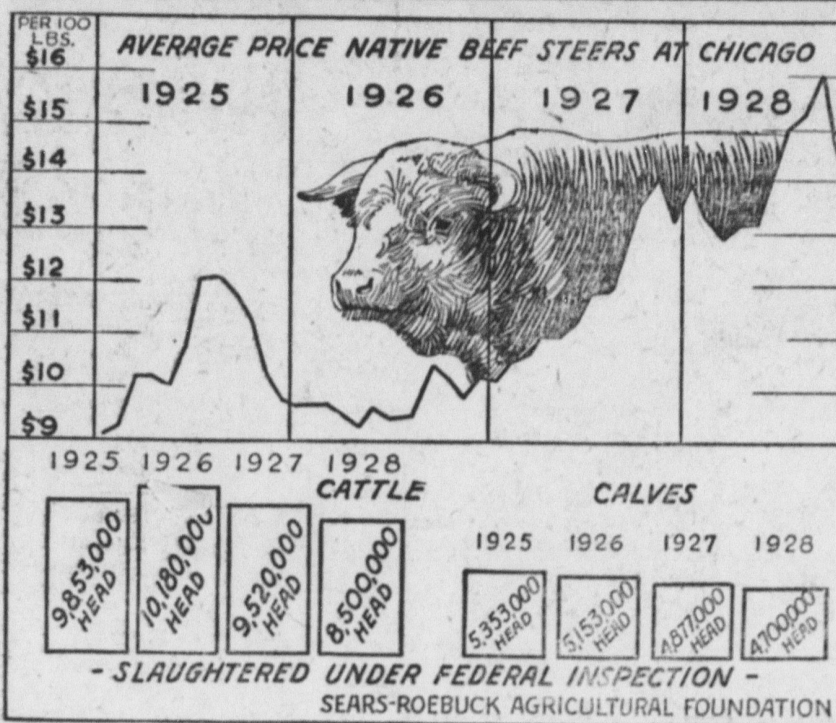

Mr. and Mrs. George O. Benner entertained at a Valentine card party, at which the following were guests: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goodhart, Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Morrow, Mr. and Mrs. William Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McMoran, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Deppoon, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Keller, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Ebricht, Miss Margaret Jacobs, Miss Verna Rowe, Miss Margaret Weidner, D. W. Bradford, Edward Durst, Edgar Miller.

Roy Dutrow, who gives poultry raising his entire time, is off to an early start for the 1929 season with 600 baby chicks which he received from the Kerlin hatchery last week. The army of little fellows do a lot of chirping, and although coming into the world practically in the dead of winter, far ahead of the usual hatching period, the great majority bid fair to arrive at full growth owing to the splendid condition under which they will be cared for.

The faithful old horse owned by Roland Fye, of Colyer, was killed and taken to the horse morgue at Pleasant Gap. The animal was the one shot down by a hunter last fall while he was hitched to a buggy and was being driven along the edge of the mountain by Mr. Fye. Ever since then the owner had been nursing him and at one time it was thought he would recover and again be of service, but at last to the morgue.

Mr. and Mrs. Moyer Gentzell, tenants on the Brockerhoff farm east of Old Fort, are not in sympathy with the law providing for the testing of cattle for bovine tuberculosis, and fearing resistance might be offered, Veterinary Surgeon S. M. Nissley took with him two State policemen as a precaution when he went to perform that duty for the State a few days ago. The State officers made good use of their "beans" and thereby prevented hars; menstres being resorted to by the farmer and his wife.

Another Prosperous Year for Beef Cattle Growers in 1929

A prosperous year is in store for beef cattle growers in 1929, states the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation in its annual survey of market prospects. The number of cattle marketed during the year is likely to be smaller than in the past year, the supply of competitive meats probably will be less, and consumer demand promises to be as large as in the past 12 months.

While the corn belt probably has more steers in feed lots to come to market in the early part of 1929 than in the same period in 1928, they will be largely offset during those months by smaller arrivals of cows and heifers. Later in the year, receipts probably will reflect the reduction in producing capacity of herds that has occurred in the last ten years, and the close selling of young stock from the range last fall.

High prices for cattle in the last 18 months have caused growers to sell closely instead of stimulating expansion of herds. Ultimately, however, as they come to believe that these prices will persist for a considerable period, young stock will be held back to increase breeding herds and this will mean a subtraction from the market supply. Such a tendency is likely to be manifest in 1929, at least to a small degree.

The complete record for the number of cattle slaughtered in 1928 is not yet available, but it is probable that it will show around 8,500,000 head compared with 9,520,000 head slaughtered in 1927, and 10,180,000 head in 1926, when the number was the greatest for any recent year. Calf slaughter totaled about 4,700,000 head in 1928 compared with 4,877,000 in 1927, and 5,153,000 in 1926. In spite of the decline in slaughter in 1928, it is likely that it more than equaled production, so that the number of cattle kept primarily for beef on farms at the start of 1929 probably was slightly smaller than a year earlier. At that time it was smallest since 1912 and second smallest since 1898.

Cattle producers received unusually attractive prices in the last twelve months. During September, October and November, 1928, the average farm prices for all classes of beef cattle were the highest on record for the corresponding season of the year. The total income of producers for cattle in 1928 probably was 8 to 10 per cent greater than in 1927, in spite of the fewer numbers sold.

Beef cattle producers should bear in mind that high prices will not be maintained when the number marketed is increased materially, the Foundation points out. If production were held near its present volume, high prices would continue indefinitely. It is probable, however, that the attractive prices which have prevailed during the past 18 months will gradually stimulate production, although two or three years must elapse before any such increase can show up in market receipts. Until receipts do increase, beef cattle prices are due to stay on a comparatively high level. These high prices will add most to the profits of owners of breeding herds. The profits of cattle feeding will be held down by the high cost of thin steers.
