Not so many years have passed since long-distance telephone conversations were sometimes marked by a certain degree of difficulty...

Telephone users are now accustomed to the transmission of their voices to points thousands of miles away without the slightest loss of tonal volume.

Several recent events have served to bring out with unusual effectiveness the clarity with which the voice and other sounds are flashed across many miles of telephone circuits.

A lock expert in Weiser, Idaho, listening over the telephone to the muffled sounds of falling tumblers in the door of a safe at Baker, Oregon...

The venerable H. Bickford Pazmor, noted composer and teacher of voice, recently used the telephone to give his daughter, Ridiana, a half-hour singing lesson...

Expert in Another State Opens Safe by Telephone

Listens to Sound of Falling Vault Tumblers Over Long Distance Wires and Issues Instructions to Girl, Who Manipulates Combination

The etching illustrates how a lock expert in Weiser, Idaho, succeeded in directing the opening of a safe in Baker, Oregon, by use of the telephone.

Not so many years have passed since long-distance telephone conversations were sometimes marked by a certain degree of difficulty in catching the varying inflections of the human voice.

Telephone users are now accustomed to the transmission of their voices to points thousands of miles away without the slightest loss of tonal volume.

Several recent events have served to bring out with unusual effectiveness the clarity with which the voice and other sounds are flashed across many miles of telephone circuits.

Three New Buildings for Danville State Hospital

A building program involving three new structures to cost $180,000 was launched at the monthly meeting of the Danville State Hospital for mental diseases.

The new buildings for which the trustees discussed the plans are: new tuberculosis building for women, annex for female nurses home, and colony building for female patients.

Money for the structures was appropriated by the last legislature.
