The Stuff Life's Made of

A bit ago 'twas this morning, now it is afternoon, soon 'twill be evening, and another day will have come and gone. Another day—much like yesterday and the day before. Three meals and work with a bit of sociability. Nothing very exciting, just an ordinary day—yet one of the finest things in all creation.

Your life is made up of very ordinary days—just like yesterday, today and tomorrow. Those who wait for great events let most of life slip past. The wise man welcomes each new dawn as a golden opportunity—opportunity to work and play, to help his fellows, enjoy his friends, and live!

And perhaps the greatest of all today's opportunities is the opportunity to accumulate a substantial bank account which will reach into the tomorrows.
