BANKERS MEET AT STATE COLLEGE

That millions of dollars have been added to Pennsylvania farm incomes through county farm agents placed in 65 of the 67 counties by Pennsylvania State College and the Federal government, was an outstanding fact brought out by bankers at the eighth annual conference of key bankers and members of the agricultural committee of the Pennsylvania State Bankers' Association held last week-end at State College.

As one of the 60 key bankers and committeemen at the conference, H. L. Ebricht, cashier of the First National bank of Centre Hall, upon his return from State College declared a review of banker-farmer activities revealed an astonishing scope of co-operation with the State College extension service for general improvement of farm conditions throughout the State. In almost all counties the bankers, farmers and State College through its county agents, are joining hands in improving agriculture. State banks are now putting almost $30,000 a year into co-operation with upwards of 40 different kinds of agricultural projects, from girls' sewing clubs to sending judging teams and club delegations to young Farmers' Week and Farm Products Shows.

In addition to Mr. Ebricht this county was represented at the State College 3-day meeting by N. E. Robb, treasurer Bellefonte Trust Co.

Taxation costs to the farmer are out of all proportion to those in any other business, bankers learned from college agricultural economic specialists, and they commended the college for studies which it has started in this important matter. It was stated the farmer cannot progress economically under the present system and bankers urged college workers to continue these studies and evolve, if possible, a tax program based on productivity of their farms.

Where farms are no longer able to produce economically college specialists recommend reforestation. In addition to economic problems facing the farmer of today, the bankers learned of the 50-year fertilizer experiments where it was shown that every dollar wisely invested in fertilizer returns two dollars to the farmer, and on a visit to the livestock range saw the advantage of fattening steers on a corn silage ration.

The biggest thrill for the bankers was the opportunity on Friday afternoon to meet the 850 farm club boys and girls who were visiting State College at the same time for the annual club work with which so many banks of the State have co-operated for many years.
