Cuckoo's Queer Conduct Due to Big Appetite

The habit of the European cuckoo at laying its eggs in other birds' nests and thus foisting the care of its young upon unwilling foster parents is not as unnatural as it has been given the discredit for being, according to Doctor Dobay, a Hungarian zoologist.

Doctor Dobay points out three facts that may help to explain the cuckoo's peculiar conduct.

First, the cuckoo is a great eater. He devours hundreds of insects and worms in a day. This forces him to be a great hunter, constantly on the move. He would probably be kept on short rations if he and his mate had to stay close to a nest, not to mention the difficulty of getting enough additional food for a hungry

Second, Mrs. Cuckoo is strongly against race suicide. She lays from 20 to 25 eggs in a season, as against a modest six or ten, produced by other birds. No birds going, no matter how industrious, could feed a family like that. Better make orphans of them, and trust to providence and the bounty

Finally, no bird ever sits until she has laid her whole "clutch" of eggs. If the cuckoo waited until all her eggs were laid, the first ones would be spoiled before the last were produced and she was ready to incubate them.

It appears, therefore, Doctor Dobay concludes, that the apparently heartless behavior of the cuckoo is the only practical method open to provide for the continued existence of the cuckoo species.-Kansas City Star.

Device Clears Spray From Ship's Lookout

One of the most responsible positions in the world is that of the man on the bridge directing the course of a great ship. For him, clear, certain and unobstructed vision is imperative at all times, and especially so in a driving storm when sight is most difficult. His eyes must be protected as he looks out, and a clear sheet of glass is the obvious suggestion. But rain and spray and snow drive against the glass and accumulate upon it, and the most constant wiping of the surface, even by the most untiring mechanical devices, is often of little avail. Suddenly and quite recently there has come a solution of this perplexity and, as usual, a very simple one. A polished glass disk, rotated by an electric motor at such a speed that nothing can be deposited on it that will adhere for an instant, is the solution of the problem. The device is being manufactured by a responsible English firm and distributed on both sides of the Atlantic .- Compressed Air Maga-

Grouse Moors in Scotia

Scotland's grouse moors were recently opened to hunters. Philadelphians were among those leasing a moor. The British grouse should really be styled ptarmigan. The chief difference between it and the ordinary grouse is that the toes are thickly feathered. When winter comes on the claws grow long and tough, to enable it to scrape away the ice and snow of the northern habitat and find its food. The ptarmigan nest on the ground in the heather, or in thickets where these are to be found. Their food comprises insects, berries. nuts and even leaves. they are not hard to satisfy. Laving brown eggs, highly mottled with black the ptarmigan when winter comes as sume a protective hue of white in 11/2 Acres place of summer's defensive coloration of reddish brown. Their domestic habits are exemplary, for they are monogamous, nor does the male strut about in a vain parade of his paces and his feathers for the admiration of

Human Nose Imperfect

The human nose is not perfectly trained and its powers are not developed to the point of providing accurate information when one depends on the power of smelling for guidance. In fact, scientists say smelling is far the most imperfectly developed of the senses. It is vastly inferior to the power of sight, as by sight the average individual is able to identify many thousands of different articles and objects. While if one tries the sense of smell on a dozen odors and perfumes, there will be a poor record made, and many perfumes taken from known flowers will be perfect strangers to the human nose .- Ohio State Journal.

The Real Culprit

The dusk was gathering over the little market town when Tammas Mac-Phurson emerged from the Inn door, cranked up his car, and, slightly overshooting the mark, planted himself Dwelling solemnly in the back seat. The watchful village policeman approached him and said in kindly tones: "Noo, Tammas, ye'll need to come oot of that, ye're nae fit to drive." "Mind yer ain business," was the rejoinder, and then in magisterial tones Tammas proceeded: "It would suit ye better to catch the chiel that's stolen my driving wheel,"-Argonaut.
