

A New Pirate

"Ha, ha!" exclaimed Black, as he encountered his friend White in the street the other day. "I say, you are a one!"

"A one? What do you mean?" asked the other in a puzzled tone.

"I saw you the other night," went on his friend. "You were round in the park, walking arm-in-arm with Miss Lightfoot."

"Oh, did you see me?"

"Yes, when's it to be?"

"Don't be a fool!" said White. "I can't stand the girl, really. She uses far too much makeup to suit my taste."

"Yes, she'd be quite a nice girl if she'd give up piracy."

"Piracy!" exclaimed the other. "What do you mean?"

"Why, trying to make captures under false colors!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Experience of Dollar Bill

The Chicago chamber of commerce recently carried out an interesting experiment in order to trace what happened to a dollar bill within the short space of 14 days. It put into circulation a new bill, with a circular attached asking every person into whose hand it came to make a note of the use he had made of it. By the end of the fortnight it had been spent 31 times—five times in payment of salaries or wages, five times for tobacco, five times for cigarettes, three times for meals, three times for candy, twice for shaves, twice for "men's furnishings," and once for collar buttons, automobile accessories, bacon, washing powder, garters, and tooth paste respectively.

Use Salt Sparingly

Did you use 120 pounds of salt last year? If not you did not get your share, for according to the United States bureau of mines, there were 6,803,115 short tons of this necessary substance used or sold by producers in the United States in 1924. Even then Americans used salt more sparingly, for in the year before the allowance per person was about 127 pounds. Over a third of all this salt is in the form of brine and the rest is evaporated and rock salt. New York, Michigan and Ohio produce nearly four-fifths of all the salt in the United States, and Kansas, Louisiana and California practically all the rest.

PERT URGES WIDER USE OF NEW POLICE TELEPHONE SYSTEM

William F. Hoffman Points Out Advantages of Service New in Operation in this State

Communication is considered half the battle in the effort of police to apprehend criminals, and this phase of the fight against lawlessness in Pennsylvania is being won through the medium of the telephone typewriter system, in the opinion of William F. Hoffman, chief of the Bureau of Criminal Identification, Pennsylvania State Police.

Co-operation also is essential in the apprehension of criminals, according to Mr. Hoffman. In discussing recently the efficiency of the Pennsylvania police telephone typewriter system, which was placed in service last December 23, he said:

"We now have before us a new problem in police education. We must acquaint police officers of the smaller towns with the benefits obtainable from this system. Many of them, not having a telephone typewriter receiver installed in their town, fail to take advantage of the system for rapid communication. Should a forger or confidence man victimize a citizen in a small town, or should an automobile be stolen, the chief of police, by telephoning information concerning the crime to the nearest sending station of the system, can have 100 other police forces in the State on the lookout for the criminal within fifteen minutes. Inquiry along this line can be made over the telephone typewriter more rapidly and efficiently than by any other method. "This system is still in its infancy, but we are sending more than 900 State-wide broadcasts each month."

Ben Franklin's Lightning Rod Still Good After 150 Years

Benjamin Franklin, recognized father of the lightning rod, was appointed in 1759 by the Royal Society of London, at the request of King George III, to provide St. Paul's Cathedral with proper protection against lightning.

Cathedral and Piece of Old Lightning Rod.

The architect of this famous church was the great Sir Christopher Wren, who lived to see it completed in 1710. Franklin devised a system of lightning protection which made use of the metal parts of the building itself as conductors; and wherever there was a break, he had it bridged over with specially designed heavy iron bars.

Though more than a hundred and fifty years old, those bars of honest iron are still sound and strong to this day. They were ordered replaced a few years ago, and when taken out were found as good as new—practically in the same condition as ever.

This information is given on the authority of Alfred Hands, M. I. E. E., F. R. Met. S., of J. H. Gray & Son, manufacturers and erectors of lightning conductors, London, England.

The rods, when analyzed, were found to be typical of good wrought iron. Like all true wrought iron it was thoroughly impregnated with tiny slag fibres, but was otherwise composed of a metal of high purity. Rust had attacked it upon the surface, but had not penetrated deeply at any spot, though for 158 years the bars were exposed to the fogs and damps of London. So while copper may make more efficient lightning rods, there was no occasion to seek more durable o. s.
