RADIO-TELEPHONE PLANNED TO LINK U. S. WITH HAWAII

Construction of Transmitting and Receiving Stations to Be Begun This Year

Radio-telephone circuits connecting the United States and Hawaii are scheduled to be placed in operation in January, 1932, according to a recent announcement by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. As a prelude to the establishment of telephone service across the Pacific, sites for radio stations have been purchased in California by the Trans-Pacific Communication Company, Ltd., a subsidiary of the A. T. & T. Co. Construction work is to be begun early this year. A transmitting station similar to those used in trans-Atlantic telephone service is to be built at Dixon, near Sacramento. The receiving station will be at Point Reyes, on the California coast north of San Francisco. Initially the radio channels will be connected with the facilities of the Mutual Telephone Company of Hawaii. The Bell System proposes eventually to establish circuits to Japan, Australia, the Philippines and Alaska, as well as ships at sea.

Service to Australia

Another nation was brought within speaking distance of the United States on October 27 when regular commercial telephone service was established between North America and Australia.

The circuit employed for this service is the longest ever established for commercial telephony. It consists principally of two radio links, one across the Atlantic to England and the other from England to Australia. With the wire lines involved in a connection between New York and Sydney, the circuit is more than 14,000 miles long. The A. T. and T. Company recently made application to the Federal Radio Commission for a permit to erect stations for a short-wave radio-telephone service between the United States and the Bermuda Islands.

Interest in All Lives

If a man is fairly intelligent, he has had experience of interest; if disposed to frankness, his autobiography would be of value. Every man can place colors on the life picture a little differently. I find much more interest in a good autobiography than in any story of polar exploration. There is nothing at the North pole that concerns any of us; nothing in life that does not.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.
