FARM CALENDAR

TIMELY REMINDERS FROM PENNSYLVANIA STATE COLLEGE SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURE

Control Root Maggots.
The root maggot is a serious pest of early cabbage, cauliflower, and radishes. A number of control methods are used. The one least expensive and very effective is the corrosive sublimate method. Use one ounce of powder to eight gallons of water and apply a half teacupful around each cabbage or cauliflower or saturate the soil along the radishes.

Cultivate Frequently.
The surface layer of garden soil should be kept in a loose, fine condition by frequent shallow cultivation. This lessens the danger of cutting off the roots and is just as effective as deep cultivation in keeping the weeds down.

Build Range Shelter.
If the brooder house is overcrowded the summer housing problem can be solved by building a summer range shelter.

Stake Large Peonies.
It is sometimes necessary to stake up the larger flowering peonies. This may be done by using a support that encircles the whole plant.

Use Health Aids.
Cleanliness, sunlight, fresh air, and disinfectants are important aids in farm sanitation.

Feed Good Cows.
It costs no more to feed a good cow than a poor one. The difference comes in the returns.

Beautiful the Grounds.
Landscaping develops beauty in the farm home setting. Trees, correctly placed give character and individuality to the premises. They add permanence and stability to the appearance of the farm.

Grow Profitable Lambs.
Wether lambs that have been docked sell for higher market prices than do undocked ram lambs. It is good business to follow the practice which is most profitable.

WHEN YOU'RE INSIDE LOOKING OUT

THE second hand on the electric clock ticks off the last minute of the hour, the radio announcer leans closer to his microphone, the orchestra leader raises his hand, and, then,—as the engineer, behind the window of the control room, gives the signal... "Good evening, My friends,"—and another major broadcast is on the air. Only the fortunate few have been privileged to witness a broadcast from the inner sanctum, where the engineer sits, with one eye glued to his sensitive meters and the other on the performers outside the window. The above picture was taken recently during a broadcast of the Lucky Strike Dance Orchestra. Just outside the window may be seen Edward Thorgersen, announcer, and back of him, B. A. Rolfe with a few of the musicians, who make up this popular orchestra of over fifty veteran instrumentalists, grouped at the microphones. It is a thrilling experience to watch the man at the control board as he listens, supercritically, to the music which comes out a loudspeaker in his control room, just as it comes out of loud speakers in a million homes. He must maintain just the right balance of tone and volume, and guide the fluctuating pulse of the broadcast, while the production man, standing at his left, stop-watch in hand, sees that everything moves on pre-arranged schedule, so that no flaws will mar the entertainment that brings pleasure to a nation.

THOUSAND DISASTERS RECEIVED RED CROSS AID IN 50 YEARS

American Society to Celebrate Its Birth Year With Nationwide Observance

Tornadoes, floods, forest fires and other calamities and upheavals of nature have visited the United States more than one thousand times in the last half century.

All of these were of severe intensity, causing loss of life and great property damage. Minor catastrophes were not counted in this list of disasters, which has been made public by the American Red Cross, in connection with the celebration this year of its fiftieth birthday.

It was on the evening of May 21, 1881, in the modest home of Miss Clara Barton in Washington, D. C., that the American Association of the Red Cross was first formed. Before the year was out, and before, indeed, the United States Government had officially moved to approve the Treaty of Geneva, adding this nation to the company of thirty-two others adhering to the treaty to protect wounded in warfare, Miss Barton had plunged the small society into a disaster relief task.

First Red Cross Unit

This was in the north woods of Michigan, where forest fires swept the homestead farms of pioneering families. Miss Barton, as president of the Red Cross, had organized a branch in Danville, New York, where she was sojourning. This little group immediately raised money, food, clothing and other supplies and sent them to the forest fire victims. In Rochester and Syracuse, New York, nearby, word spread of this charitable enterprise, and Red Cross auxiliaries were organized there to help. So began the disaster relief work of the Red Cross fifty years ago. In the intervening years, millions of men, women and children have been aided. Thousands of homes have been restored. Thousands of persons, overwhelmed by floods, tornadoes, and fires until all they possessed had been wiped away, have been rehabilitated and prosperity and happiness again smiled upon them.

This year has been dedicated by the Red Cross and its chapters in 3,500 communities to commemoration of the events which led to the birth of the society in the United States.

President Hoover Speaks

The celebration of the anniversary was inaugurated in Washington at a dinner, attended by many distinguished men and women, at which Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes presided, and President Hoover, who is the president of the American Red Cross, was the chief speaker. Judge Max Huber of Geneva, Switzerland, the president of the International Committee of the Red Cross, in which fifty-seven nations are joined in a Red Cross brotherhood, also was a speaker, as were Chairman John Barton Payne of the American Red Cross, and Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary, and veteran leader of the society.

The Red Cross standard, which flies all around the world where mercy is needed, was first introduced as an ideal in our modern civilization in Geneva in 1864, when the International Red Cross convention, afterward to be known as the Treaty of Geneva, was signed by twelve countries agreeing that on the battlefield the wounded

A MAN MAY BE DOWN... HE NEED NEVER BE OUT

THE SALVATION ARMY we believe coined this phrase. It is one of those eternal verities it is well to ponder over—especially at these times. If a man is down he need not feel he is out. By taking whatever small sum he has and opening an account here—keeping it absolutely untouched—it will only be a matter of time before that man will be up again in the world—marching steadily ahead, progressing to a fuller, larger life.

FOR THERE is a psychology about a bank account—makes one feel more confident—gives assurance—engenders real courage to fight the battle of life.
