HEAT

The newest vision of science is a substance which will take the place of steam for heating purposes. Diphenyl, a substance obtained from benzene, is said by the American Institute of Chemical Engineers to be much better for this purpose. It is a solid substance which melts at a temperature of 157 degrees and vaporizes at 492 degrees.

A house heating plant using diphenyl would have boiled and pipes full of this solid, which would gradually become liquid as the fire was started, and would circulate through pipes and radiators like water. It holds heat better than steam, and is said to give off more of the heat from the boiler furnace than steam does.

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS

For many years New York City has had a "Be Kind to Animals" week. It would seem unnecessary to have a special week for this purpose, but New York enjoys it, and is pleased with the results. Every week everywhere should be kindness to animals week. Nature's creatures housed in cities, deprived of their liberties, and unable to enjoy natural rights, have a hard time of it even when cared for in the best possible manner. The worst sufferers are the small pets, mainly dogs and cats. But even the valuable horse does not always receive the good treatment its patience and willingness to work should command. Pets are only as good as the treatment they are given. Not fed, or half-fed, permitted to roam at large for their food, bothering the neighbors and doing damage and harm to other life and property, and occasionally locked out of the house at night, they often become pests and nuisances. But for all that the "Be Kind to Animals" week is all right. The only regret is that it isn't fifty-two instead of just one week in the year.

MUSIC SCORE FOR BLIND
