"In a world of airplanes, bombs, heavy artillery and high explosives, the Great Wall of China is of no value as an obstacle to an enemy army," says the Bulletin. "Because this is true, and has been for a long time, the Great Wall has come to be looked upon by many as a prodigious folly. But in its day it was of incalculable value to the peace-loving Chinese who were able for considerable periods to keep the 'Northern Barbarians' out of their country.

Once Effective Barrier. "The wall was effective because enemies of the northern plains came against China with unorganized armies of cavalry, which, many times, beat ineffectively against the wellmanned barrier. There were occaslons, it is true, when the hordes broke through; but these successful forays and the losses that flowed from them strikingly emphasize the value of the wall through the many years when it functioned successfully.

study to the student or child. In ! those days there was little child study, but there was scholarship; and this was an advantage to the child in some ways. People did not study him, but he was allowed to study." It was the last sentence which attracted me. I am wondering if we are not making things too easy in our school work. I am not at all sure that with all of our study of methods of presentation of a subject so as to smooth out the road for the student, and with all of our study of the student in order that we may better determine what he is best suited for and then how to awaken his interest in this most suitable subject, we have succeeded in educating our young people any better or any more easily than we did before these problems were seriously considered. I wish some one would prove to me that we have, for such proof would be very gratifying to me.

I am wondering if in this fever to study the student in schools and colleges we are fitting him in any better way himself to study. I'm just wondering.

Odd Wall Design

A petrified snake, outlined in bas relief on a stone perhaps millions of years old, will appear in the wall of the first stone house to be built in Warren county, Pennsylvania, in seventy years. The fossil form, about two feet long, resembles a garter snake. Al Westren, builder of the house, was showing visitors over the scene. While inspecting the stone to be used in the construction, all of which is being used just as it is found on the hillsides, one of the visitors noted the form of the snake. Westren decided to use the stone in the construction.-Indianapolis News.

STUDYING THE STUDENT

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I have just read the life of Rachael McMillan, an English woman who spent her life in the service of young people. The biography is written by her sister who tells, among other things, something of the school life of the young English girl. "Children learned things then," she says, "that they did not understand, as well as things they must grasp and know." Our grandmother entirely approved of this method. She said it gave us something to think of as we grew older. . . "Every child owned his own books and carried them in a bag slung over his shoulder. Home work was insisted on. The lessons were often given with enthusiasm, for the teacher loved the subject matter even if, as often bappened, he cared little for the children. It is remarkable how the center of interest
