FARM CALENDAR.

Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

Plant Strong Seedlings—

Well-grown plants, properly transplanted, produce both earlier and larger yields of vegetables. Early cabbage and tomato plants are particularly important. Transplanting on a cloudy day or in the late afternoon and the use of water in dry soil help to avoid losses.

Avoid Early Pasturing—

Do not turn cows on pasture until the grass has a good start. Then do not overstock. If pastures are divided by a fence so that cattle can have alternate periods of two weeks on each part, much more feed will be realized.

Keep Wool Dry—

Wool should be stored in a clean, dry place until it is sold. The basement is not suitable for such a product.

Separate Birds—

Remove the cockerels from the breeding flock at the close of the hatching season, say State College poultry specialists.

Aid Pollination—

Bouquets of flowers from appropriate trees can be placed in solid blocks of single apple varieties to aid pollination. Bees also are essential in securing an adequate set of fruit.

Make Kitchen Convenient—

Arranging kitchen equipment to save steps and decrease drudgery is a practical way of increasing efficiency and prolonging life. Convenience often can be obtained at comparatively low cost.

Provide Early Pasture—

Some farmers are planning to pasture part of their wheat and rye because of low grain prices. An acre will provide good grazing for 2 or 3 cows for 3 or 4 weeks.

Conditions Must Be Right—

Plant and sow when soil and weather conditions are favorable and not according to the calendar or the moon. Good seed and well-prepared soil are more important than custom.

On this account no services were held in the churches on Sunday—more than twenty cases of fever were reported on Sunday; a number of folks are also ill with grippe, consequently there is not much news to report from this vicinity.
