FARM CALENDAR.

Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

Plant Trees Early—

Farmers who want to start a Christmas tree plantation this spring can still purchase and get delivery from northern nurseries. Some of these continue to ship until June 1 or even a little later. Quick delivery by express and prompt planting of the seedlings are imperative. Late planting is hazardous because hot, dry weather is likely to attend and follow the planting.

Grow Dairy Feed—

Soybeans may be used to supply two of the dairyman's most serious needs. They will produce 1 1/2 to 2 tons of hay an acre, about equal to alfalfa in feeding value. They also will grow a large quantity of green feed to be cut for the cows in August when pastures are short and poor. Soybeans seed is cheap. Sow two bushels an acre about corn planting time. Cut when the beans are formed in the pod in late August. The beans should be inoculated, especially on thin land.

Fertilize Berry Patch—

New Strawberry plantings should be fertilized immediately if this important part of the proper care and culture has not already been done. An application of 200 pounds of sulphate of ammonia or nitrate of soda applied as a side dressing along the row newly set strawberry plants will give the best results. The fertilizer must not be allowed to come in direct contact with the roots or leaves.

Use Wheel Hoe—

The most economical way to cultivate the garden is with a wheel hoe, where the rows must be spaced closely, or with a horse cultivator if the garden is located in the field. With the garden planted in long, straight rows, the hoe may be greatly displaced by the wheel hoe and a greater quantity of vegetables can be grown to feed the family.

Order Locust Seedlings—

Farmers needing locust timber for fence posts should make applications now for delivery next spring. The demand is heavy and it is expected that the available supply of seedlings will be allocated by the end of the summer. Blanks for ordering trees can be obtained from your county agent.

Attend Farmers' Day—

Take a vacation and go to school the same day. Thursday, June 9, is Farmers' Field Day at the Pennsylvania State College.

FOR SALE—Ice refrigerator, suitable for small family; cheap. Apply at Reporter office.
