Spring Mills.

Miss Myrtle Rachau, of Sadsbury, was visiting her cousin, Miss Josephine Stover, during commencement. Miss Stover was a member of the graduating class.

Mrs. Della Reiber, of Centre Hall, and her daughter, Miss Mary, of Dr. Sanford's hospital at Jersey Shore, were visiting some of their friends in town last week.

The Union Sunday school at Beaver Dam will have their annual picnic and festival on Saturday, July 9. The Spring Mills band will be present during the evening to entertain the crowd. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Dukeman of Clearfield, spent a few hours in town on Monday on their way home from decorating the graves of some of their deceased friends.

Memorial Day was properly observed at the Union church at Farmers Mills on Monday. The program consisted of a number of recitations by the children; music was rendered by the choir; quartets, and Miss Mabel Hagen sang a solo which was enjoyed by everybody. Miss Sara Foreman presided at the piano and played a voluntary that was delightful. There was a large crowd present and apparently everyone in the community took an interest in the services. Rev. Harkins of State College delivered a very suitable address.

Dairymen's Milk League had a very interesting meeting last Saturday evening. The entertainment consisted of a reading by D. W. Miles of State College, entitled, "A Hoosier Romance," or "Dr. Hawkin's Story, and a comedy in three acts, "A Family Mixup." There was also instrumental and vocal music. The evening was enjoyed by a full house.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Harter, of Altoona, were visiting some of their friends in this community over the week-end.

"HELL'S STRETCH" OVER PENNSYLVANIA MOUNTAINS OVERCOME BY PILOTS

An Associated Press correspondent writes the following from Pittsburgh under date of May 28:

"Hell's Stretch," Pennsylvania's graveyard of aviators, has surrendered at last to the inventive genius of man.

For more than ten years, every flight over the Allegheny ridges in Central Pennsylvania was a personal encounter with the violence of nature, unleashed in driving fury that pulled pilots to their death in frail ships of the sky.

But the indomitable spirit of those who have flown the United States mail from Cleveland to New York has overcome the terror.

Today, sleek, sturdy swift mail planes streak between those two cities both night and day, while huge multi-colored transports, bearing business men, women and even children, fly daily schedules in safety.

The ability to erase the terror of the short stretch between Aronsburg and Bellefonte, which pilots swore was the playground of the devil, was not easily won.

Close to a score of pilots, pioneers in winged transportation, have died since flying began over the route on June 16, 1919. But their comrades carried on.

Not a man has died on "Hell's Stretch" since smiling, black-haired Jimmy Cleveland flew into the summit of Nittany Mountain on May 22, 1931.

Every year, except three, since the service began, at least one pilot has gone to his death on the Cleveland-New York leg of the northern transcontinental run. Four perished in 1929.

Their frail planes were ripped apart by raging thunderstorms, they were driven into mountain sides by howling winds and treacherous clutching air currents.

They were blinded by hurricane-driven snow or dragged to their death by that arch-enemy, sleet, which clung to their wings and plunged them into the fascinating, though terrifying beauty of wooded rock-strewn, mountain sides.

Meanwhile courageous comrades flew on and men labored in laboratories to develop planes and motors that would carry men and mail safely.

Two-way radio communication between ground stations and planes was developed. Now the pilot can be warned of sudden squalls or unfavorable conditions in time to permit him to run around them or return to his base.

Blind-flying instruments, more reliable than human senses, guide pilots through weather the eye cannot penetrate. Trained observers assemble data from altitude hitherto unattainable.

Pilots still keep a rendezvous with the phantom ships guided by the spirits of Charles Ames, "Wild Bill" Hopson and Jack Webster, and outwitted nature still reaches out for man-made birds, but the wooded slopes and rocky crags of "Hell's Stretch" have become a mere beauty spot to be admired by passengers.

"Nerves" NERVES "Nerves"

Dr. Miles' NERVINE "Did the work" says Miss Glivar WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT?

After more than three months of suffering from a nervous ailment, Miss Glivar used Dr. Miles' Nervine which gave her such splendid results that she wrote us an enthusiastic letter.

If you suffer from "Nerves," if you lie awake nights, start at sudden noises, tire easily, are cranky, blue and fidgety, your nerves are probably out of order. Quiet and relax them with the same medicine that "did the work" for this Colorado girl.

Whether your "Nerves" have troubled you for hours or for years, you'll find this time-tested remedy effective.

At Drug Stores 25c and $1.00.
