$15,000,000 STATE REVENUE CONCEALED BY PINCHOT

Assembly Discovers Itself Victim of Trick Bookkeeping—Millions Kept Under Cover So Governor Can Point to Surplus.

"The Pinchot administration concealed more than $15,000,000 in anticipated State revenue to trick the Legislature into levying new taxes." This is the accusation made by "The Right of Way," published in Harrisburg.

The mid-summer special legislative session enacted the Talbot bill to provide $12,000,000 for relief of the unemployed. Crying that no money was in sight to meet this appropriation, the Governor demanded new revenue to match this obligation.

To meet that situation and to be certain the relief money would be approved by the Governor, the Legislature finally levied a general sales tax of one per cent of gross sales for six months. This tax is estimated to produce $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 in the six months' period but may produce much more.

But at the same time that the Governor was insisting that there was 'no money' he and his financial experts were keeping under cover approximately $15,000,000 in expected revenue to deceive the Legislature.

The trick was revealed in a resolution made part of the official House record on the last night of the session, but that was too late, for the tax bill was already being passed on to the Governor, who signed it almost the minute he received it.

The sales tax was forced upon the people of Pennsylvania without justification, because the money was not needed to meet the Talbot act's requirements. The money was available but kept out of sight of the legislature to give the Pinchot administration that much more money in its till.

"The Right of Way" has explained in recent issues how Governor Pinchot has used the State payroll and State appointments to build up the Pinchot political machine. Money buys power, and money provides salaries for more jobs.

Not on Snow Shoe Mt.

It was near Colyer, in Potter township, the incident cited below happened, and not on Snow Shoe Mountain. The paragraph is from "Over the Town," by John M. Fleming, and reads:

"Over on the Snow Shoe mountain about two years ago a hunter shot an old nag right out of the shafts of a buggy in which an elderly couple were slowly winding their way up the mountain. What a surprised hunter that fellow would be."

The story, which was true, was reported to this office by the "mayor" of Colyer, Dave Young, and what "Dave" tells you is based on facts.

PETITION TO VACATE BARTGES AND GREGG ROADS

Potter township residents are petitioning to have two cross roads connecting the Brush Valley and Earlystown Pinchot roads vacated. One of these roads is known as the Bartges road, leading off the Earlystown road at the Bartges farm and connecting with the Brush Valley road at the Robert Bloom farm, while the second road connects with the Earlystown road west of the Spicher farm and leads by Gregg Station to the Pine Stump school house on the Brush Valley road. Each road is approximately one mile in length.

NOT INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

Phillipsburg had an infantile paralysis scare during last week, but was finally blasted when it was positively proven that the death of James Cunningham, aged 43 years, was due to eating string beans canned by his wife which had become tainted. The disease is known as botulism of botulinum and in some respects in its action resembles diphtheria. There is no temperature but a persistent paralysis of the throat. A physician sent to Phillipsburg from Harrisburg by the State Board of Health, pronounced the case infantile paralysis and quarantined the home. Later the quarantine sign was removed. A baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham also became seriously ill from the same cause and died a day after the death of her father.

"TALL STORY" BY THE STATE COLLEGE TIMES

The State College Times in its last issue came across with a "tall story" to match one by the P. S. C. Alumni secretary. And here are two paragraphs of it:

Contrasted to this was the experience of Helen Homan, daughter of Frank Homan, residing on the Whitehall road:

Helen was swimming the other day and decided to try a few strokes under water. She did so but when she came to the surface she sensed that something was wrong. Reaching the shore she began investigating and located a nice-sized bass in her bathing suit.

In the issue of the Times forwarded herself to a particular letter and in removing the wrapper it was also removed, very materially changing the character of the object located.

HESSIAN FLY DAMAGES WHEAT FIELDS IN CENTRE

Wheat fields in Centre county last year were badly damaged by the Fly, according to the report just received by County Agent R. C. Blaney from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Hessian Fly Laboratory, Carlisle, Pa.

The infestation of the Fly in this county last year ran 24 per cent.

As a result of the fly the yields of wheat were materially decreased. It was evident from observation that the later sown wheat was not damaged nearly so much as the earlier sown wheat.

H. E. Hodgkiss, Extension Entomologist at State College, has recommended for the last few years in sowing wheat after the 20th of September as a control method for the Hessian fly. In a recent communication he states that evidence has been brought forth that shows that it is safer to hold off seeding until the 25th of September. This being a much safer date for seeding it is too late for the Hessian Fly to develop in the young plants.

PENN STATE BEGINS 7TH YEAR AS FALL TERM CLASSES OPEN

The seventy-seventh year of the Pennsylvania State College's history will begin with the opening convocation and first classes of the term Wednesday of next week, September 21. Registration for the three upper classes was conducted Monday and Tuesday; the 1250 members of the new freshman class registered this week.

Final check of the enrollment for the term cannot be made for several days but it is expected that it will equal that of recent years in view of the fact that a full freshman class enrolled.

There were no major changes in the faculty this year, resignations and replacements being restricted to those of lower rank. Two new buildings will be ready for full use for the first time this year, the Dairy building and Home Economics.
