DAILY IMPROVEMENT

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Late Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

Mr. Richard Lovell Edgeworth, the father of Maria of fictional fame, according to his biographer, was a man of tremendous energy. He was always taking up something new, always interested in some invention. He invented all sorts of things, and in a score of ways he did "almost pretty well." He had a theory that no matter how old or advanced one became one should improve himself daily.

"You can improve," Mr. Edgeworth used to tell his children, "every day of your life. With this power of improvement you may in time be anything; without it you can be nothing."

It was a theory which he himself did not always carry out, but it is certainly one worthy of the serious consideration of everyone. Huntley went out of business not long ago, bankrupt. And yet I can remember when he had the finest store in town, the biggest trade in the line of merchandise which he carried. He was looked upon as one of the most prosperous business men we had. But he never improved. While other men were remodeling their business buildings or adding new fronts with more attractive plate glass windows, Huntley made no change in the general appearance of his store. Soon it began to look like a back number—out of date, old-fashioned. He did not change his stock or his methods to meet new conditions. Some one came along and started a rival institution, and soon Huntley's trade fell off, his enthusiasm waned, he began to lose money and ultimately he was closed out, and all because he didn't give his mind to improving every day.

Burroughs, twenty years ago, was looked upon as a coming man in his department of teaching. His lectures were illuminating, the book he was getting out was the expression of the latest thought in his field. His friends were sure that by the time he reached middle age he would be recognized as one of the great men in his field of education. He gives about the same lectures today he did twenty years ago, and the things that were true then are not true today.

Discovering the Northeast Passage

The Sibirakov, the expedition ship of the Russian Soviet that recently set a new passage across the Arctic from Russia to Japan, stranded on the heavy ice floes of the Arctic during its journey when it lost its propeller blades. After gruelling labors in the cold, icy waters, the crew succeeded in lifting up the stern of the vessel and fitting it with new blades for the remainder of the journey.

English Land Held by Lincoln Family

Antiquarian research has unearthed an interesting reminder of what is believed to be a link in the early history in England of Abraham Lincoln's family.

A record collated by J. E. Ansell of the Society of Genealogists shows that one Abraham Lincoln was a holder of land in Norfolk in the early part of the Eighteenth century. This record as published in the Times tells how in 1726 Abraham Lincoln and Sara, his wife, were joint vendors with Isaac Lincoln and Edward Rush and Lydia, his wife, of nine acres of land in the parishes of Garboldisham and Aldeby, Norfolk, to one Sir Edmund Bacon.—Exchange.

Stephens of 112 N. 24th St., Camden, says: "I was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. I could not eat a thing; did not rest well at night and finally became so weak I was right down in bed. Had dizzy spells and spots blurred my vision. I used only two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it improved my appetite, rid me of the nervous condition and also the dizzy spells. I felt like a new person after I used it." Sold by druggists everywhere.

ATHEISM CAMPAIGN OF RUSSIA EXPOSED

Details of Five-Year Plan Never Fully Published.

New York.—Details of a "five-year plan of atheism," never published in full by the Soviet government, were made known by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. The organization received a report on the plan, it was said, from a European correspondent.

The anti-religious decree, effective last May 15, appeared in part in the Advance Guard of Youth, described as the journal of the Pan-Unionist Commission Extraordinary for the Fight Against Religion, according to the correspondent. The complete decree is said to have 118 articles divided into five sections, corresponding to the five years. During the first year measures were to be taken to close all religious schools, academies and Catholic seminaries and to discontinue the teaching of theology.

Ban All Churches.

During the second year, the edict is quoted as saying, the campaign is to be conducted to the end that "from May 1, 1937, there shall not remain a single house of prayer in Soviet territory. The very concept of 'God' will be expelled from the Soviet Union as an instrument to oppress the working masses."

From 1933, there is to be organized a drive against religion in the home and in the old convents, the correspondent says. "By October," he adds, "it is expected that all Soviet institutions will be 'purified' through the absence of persons holding religious beliefs. The printing of religious books, brochures and reviews for the use of religious bodies will be rigorously forbidden. The preparation of objects necessary to religious worship will be punished with extreme severity. Special attention will be given to the incultation of 'intelligent' irreligion into the psychology of the masses." Among the things to be used are atheistic films, of which at least 150 have already been created.

Speed Up Atheism.

"During the third year greater activity is to be organized in atheistic groups. During that year all who give religious instruction who shall not have renounced their religious posts are to be expelled from Soviet territory.

"During the fourth year all churches, synagogues and houses of prayer are to be put in the hands of official institutions for the organization in these buildings of cinemas, clubs and other means of enlightened entertainment."

"During the fifth and final year, the previously achieved results in the struggle against religious mentality will be consolidated and developed."

FAMILIES KEEP THEIR MOTORS

Shrinkage in Licenses Less Than Was Expected.

New York.—That the automobile industry has a firm basis for recovery is indicated in a report issued by James Dalton, editor of Motor. The experience of 1932 shows that there is still in operation one car for every six of our population. The figures show that the American people regard their cars as an essential part of their lives and cling to them as long as possible. The record of 1932 car registrations reported by Motor discloses that there are still 20,929,061 passenger cars in operation in the United States. Counting the 3,253,292 trucks that are in operation, the total is 24,182,353 vehicles. This represents a decrease of 1,631,720 car registrations, or 6.1 per cent, from 1931, but since 1932 marks the culmination of the business recession, the decline was less than might have been expected. The trucks registered in 1932 numbered 3,253,292, which is 6.1 per cent over 1931.

A drop of only 2,192,498 car licenses from the 1929 peak is an unexpectedly small shrinkage and provides substantial evidence of the importance of individual transportation.

The editor of Motor points out that the losses in passenger car registrations since 1929 reflect with fair accuracy the relative pitch of the depression in different states. Broadly speaking, the industrial East—New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island—and the west coast held up the best. The plight of the farmer is clearly revealed in the drop in car licenses in agricultural sections. The states that had the worst decline in the three years' span were the southern and western agricultural states.

Numerically, the heaviest losses were: Michigan, 229,000 cars; Texas, 165,000; Ohio, 133,000; Oklahoma, 129,000; Iowa, North Carolina, Illinois and Wisconsin more than 100,000 cars. It is not to be concluded from these drops in car registrations since 1929 that more than 2,000,000 cars have gone to the scrap heap. A large proportion of them, while serviceable, are in storage because the owners are unable to pay operating costs.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

To remove peach stains cover stain with wet salt and let stand for 24 hours. Wash then in lukewarm water.

A pair of tweezers close by while doing ripping or pulling threads will prove quite indispensable.

Take cooked starch left after a washing and wipe the surface of linoleums. It renews the colors and affords a varnish-like protection and polish.

Turn a thoroughly heated bowl over butter that is hard. This will soften the butter throughout and may be used to spread when making sandwiches.

After cleaning your kitchen range go over the enamel part with water containing a little vinegar, then polish with a dry cloth. Your range will look like new.

If you have an old clock that refuses to run, just soak an old cloth with kerosene large enough to place in the corner of the clock.

When baking cake, grease tins and sprinkle flour on bottom and sides. This prevents cake from being crusty.

Jumps 200 Feet

A 20-inch-long squirrel-like animal which lives in the Indian archipelago, has the ability to fly, or jump, 200 feet. It is erroneously called a lemur. It has no wings. Instead, a skin membrane like a web grows out from its body and connects the four feet and tail. These "sails" are spread when the animal leaps and it glides to its destination.

Traffic Ticket a Month Too Much for Nerves

New York.—After being ticketed 13 times in as many months for traffic law violations, Mrs. Alice Sarkis, one of New York's few women taxicab chauffeurs, says she is sick and tired of what she says is persecution, and plans to quit.

Mrs. Sarkis claims to be a descendant of Pocahontas.

She says she has been harried so much with traffic tickets that she is going back to the Mattaponi reservation in Virginia, where, she asserts, her father, Chief Costello, presides over a remnant of the once powerful Algonquians.

She says she will find fishing back in Virginia not so hard on the nerves as New York traffic policemen.
