Sunday evening two cars, after com ng down the mountain together, got into a mixup on the diamond. One of the drivers, the one leading, had in mind making a turn to return the way he came, while the other driver me tended going straight through. Precisely what happened was very much in dispute, each driver blamed the other for the damaged fenders and the running board on the rear car, and a broken bumper and bent front fender on the car leading the procession of two. A "cop" was called, and after more parlying, both drivers took their respective wheels and drove off. The rear car was driven by Edward Shields, formerly of Bellefonte but now located in the eastern part of the State.
