

SUCH IS LIFE—So Say We All

NEED NEW CODE FOR THIS AGE

Injustice Under Old System Pointed Out.

The age of chivalry was responsible for many of the conventions of modern life.

When we consider that it ended more than 500 years ago, we may well come to the conclusion that some of its heritage must be out of date.

In the last thirty years we have finally changed, for better or for worse, to a very different form of civilization, and a new code of manners must accompany the change.

Especially is this true in regard to women.

They have always been brought up with the expectation of care and protection, whether they actually got it or not.

From the cradle up little boys were taught to be strong and resourceful and to guard and protect all little girls. And the girls were permitted, if not encouraged, to take advantage of their weakness and dependence.

Even under the old rules the system worked countless injustices. A boy could not strike a girl, but a girl could tease and annoy a boy until she drove him to desperation, relying on her sex for immunity.

A boy could not cry, because it was unmanly; a girl could shed buckets of tears to gain her end and it was considered natural.

Today, with women demanding and receiving equal rights with men, many of them also expect special privileges, and are taught from the cradle to use every means, fair or foul, to attain them.

It seems essential for the preservation of our tradition, if we wish to preserve it, that a new nursery code should be evolved, where boys and girls are taught fair play and mutual respect.

In this way only can we be assured that the western world will not become a matriarchy in which the men are reduced to a biological necessity by a race of gold-digging amazons.—Brooks Peters Church, in Indianapolis News.

MANY STATES TO BE DRY AFTER REPEAL

State Laws Restrict Flow in Half of Them.

Washington.—Repeal of national prohibition on December 8 is now a foregone conclusion, but a review of the situation indicates that only about half the states will have liquor this year and in some the wet flood may be sharply restricted by local option.

There are 19 states which either never had prohibition by Constitution or statute or which have cleared their books of such prohibition. These will have liquor as soon as federal prohibition is repealed and although only 10 of them have so far passed control laws it is assumed the others will quickly do so in order to start the flow of license fees into the state coffers. Six of these ten states specifically provide for local prohibition where desired.

Nineteen "Wet" States.

Of the 29 other states, 27 still have statutory prohibition and of these 27 there are 11 which also have constitutional prohibition. Two of the 29 have constitutional prohibition only. In only a few of these 29 states have arrangements been made which might clear the way for liquor by the date of federal repeal.

The 19 states where repeal is effective at once are Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Maryland, Montana, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Washington and Wisconsin. Wet organizations here include Indiana in the above list with the notation that although it repealed its prohibition enforcement act, some doubt exists as to whether a prohibition statute is still in effect.

States which have statutory prohibition are Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia and West Virginia.

Of these the following also have constitutional prohibition: Idaho, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Nebraska, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, and West Virginia.

Florida and Wyoming have constitutional prohibition alone.

Among the states which have statutory prohibition alone no plans for special sessions to act on the statutes have been reported from Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee or Vermont.

Three More May Get In.

The legislatures will meet this fall, however, in Iowa, Michigan and Minnesota, which leaves the way open to adding these states to the list which might have liquor coincident with federal repeal.

Also, a special legislative committee is considering a control law in Massachusetts, a commission is studying a control plan in Missouri, and a liquor control commission has been named in Virginia, which recently voted both for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and of the state prohibition law.

The states most likely to trail the repeal parade onto actual wet grounds are the 11 which have both statutory and constitutional prohibition and the two which have only constitutional prohibition.

The latter, Florida and Wyoming, are definitely out of the liquor group for more than a year.

MOTIVES

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Only in criminal law does motive determine the punishment for crime. If a murder is premeditated, the penalty is death. Should it have been committed by accident or without malice aforethought, the penalty may be life imprisonment. When justice demands a penalty for other violations of law the element of motive is not considered. It has been a long time since Jean Valjean, in Les Miserables, served 19 years as a galley slave in a French prison for stealing a loaf of brown bread. True, he stole the bread, but the motive which impelled the act was the hunger of the seven little children of his widowed sister. That the penalty was unjust goes without question, but how far have we advanced in this respect from the days when Victor Hugo wrote?

In the reconstruction of our social order—and who doubts it is undergoing a very significant change?—the element of motive is bound to receive more serious consideration. The most dangerous condition in our social order today is the problem of unemployment. This is due to two factors, the impossibility of procuring work by men who honestly seek for it, and the mental attitude of those men who do not care to work even when they have the opportunity. The latter believe that the government's duty is to provide shelter, food and heat for all persons deprived of these necessities.

Buckeye Quarter

Carl Cramer, quarterback on the Ohio State university team, is considered one of the most brilliant of the Buckeye players. He hails from Dayton, Ohio.

The element of motive always asks the question, Why? When welfare workers disregard the element of motive and give necessities indiscriminately to whomever applies, it only encourages that dangerous attitude which not only accepts but demands these necessities as the rights of citizenship. If a man's motive in accepting help is to escape work, there is no moral law which demands that he be assisted.

The element of motive is also vital to our national recovery. Why do we want recovery? The universal answer seems to be, recovery is essential to prosperity. But why prosperity? If our motive in seeking prosperity is that we may again become extravagant and indulgent and repeat the same mistake which brought about the depression, then the return to prosperity might be open to serious question. Whenever we have a recovery of our moral and spiritual resources along with the recovery of our material values, our prosperity will remain stable and secure and its recovery fully justified.

Frogs Alive in Clay of 34-Year-Old Wall

Schenectady, N. Y.—Examination of a bullfrog to determine whether it may have lived in hard clay beneath the foundation of a Schenectady building for 34 years, was under way today.

The frog is one of five unearthed by workmen while laying a pipe line along the foundation. The frogs were imbedded in the clay 10 feet below the surface.

The workmen tossed the frogs on the ground, believing them dead. After a few hours in the sun they started hopping about. Four escaped.

The foundation was constructed 34 years ago.

The Household

This Dressing Table Before the Window Enhances the Decoration of the Room.

There are some chambers in which it seems almost impossible to arrange the furniture because of the interference of windows. Since it is through these openings that sun and light and air with their purifying elements can get into the inclosed wallied area, the homemaker who finds this difficulty should realize that it is an error in the right direction. It is far better to have too many windows in a room than too few.

Now that the summer is spent, and draughts of air are undesirable across beds, seek to find some position for the bed which will give the sleeper protection when windows are open. To sleep in a room without windows open is to hamper good health, the air should fill the room without blowing on the sleeper.

An excellent position for the dressing table, whether it is necessary or whether it is by preference, is before a window. The dresser should be low so that the standard does not come too high above the sill. The mirror should be silhouetted against the light. The person using the dresser will find the light is good. It comes evenly from both sides and also from the top and it is thrown on the person who is reflected in the looking glass.

A Homemade Dresser.

An unsightly table can be converted into a beautiful window dresser. Cover the top with wadding first, then with glazed chintz and net. Gather the portion tacked to top edge for side and front ruffles. The dresser will be inexpensive and in the vogue. Of course silk can be used for the textile and it can be left without net over it. Or it can have mercerized sateen or percale under the net as best suits the purse. A triple mirror, stood on the top is sufficient, but one with side supports from an old bureau can be screwed to the top, or at the back of the table. If the supports are good looking, they require no decorative treatment. If not they can be covered to match the dresser.

I have seen old, low bureaus, positioned before windows, and prove successful features in the room decoration. In one instance the bureau was drawn out from the window enough for easy access to it to be permitted so that the sash could be raised or lowered readily to air the room, which was small and had but the one large window.
