WORK FOR 300,000 MEN IN PA. UNDER NEW PROGRAM

The civil works project means employment for 300,000 men in Pennsylvania. Eric H. Biddle, Civil Works administrator for this State, said at a conference on Thursday.

Biddle appealed for the co-operation of local officials in making available such projects as parks, playgrounds, and municipal improvements for the unemployed civilians. No further registration of the jobless will be necessary in Pennsylvania.

People now on relief rolls and those enrolled in employment offices will be taken care of first.

Harry H. Hopkins, director of the newly formed Civil Works Administration, will have charge of the expenditure of $400,000,000 in federal funds for immediate employment of the needy. Of this amount, it is estimated $40,000,000 will be available for Pennsylvania in four allotments of $10,000,000 each.

To take care of white collar workers, Biddle expected part of Pennsylvania's share of the funds to be devoted to surveys of flood control plans and of traffic conditions.

The task of taking 4,000,000 unemployed off relief rolls within a month by slashing red tape and starting civil works projects costing $400,000,000 was undertaken by 500 state, municipal and relief officials in regional conferences, on Thursday.

Political considerations were barred from the disbursements by President Roosevelt in an address to the visiting officials.

"We would like to have a rule," said the President, "that everyone associated with relief work never ask questions of persons needing assistance whether they are Democrats, Republicans, Socialists, or anything else."

Speed, the President said, is the prime necessity.

"The effort we are now engaged in" he declared, "is to put 4,000,000 people on the job, so that we can honestly say this winter is not going to be like last winter, or the winter before. At least half of the 4,000,000 are now on what we call a dole. When people are on a dole something happens to them mentally. The sooner we can take them off the dole, the better off we will be."

THE BANKING CODE IS FIXED BY GROUP SIX

Institutions in Six Counties Will Inaugurate Regulations Under NRA on Saturday, December 2.

Group No. 6 of the Pennsylvania Bankers' association, comprising banks in Bedford, Blair, Cambria, Centre, Clearfield and Huntingdon counties, has adopted the NRA banking code and will place the regulations and service charges provided by the code in effect on Saturday, Dec. 2.

This code has been approved by all of the eight groups of the Pennsylvania Bankers' association and is similar to that being placed in force in all other States of the Union under the banner of the NRA blue eagle.

The code to be inaugurated by the banks of the six counties embraced in Group Six has been made mandatory by both the federal banking authorities at Washington and the State banking department at Harrisburg, thus bringing within the NRA fold every bank in the State.

The NRA committee of Group Six, which perfected all plans incident to the code at a recent meeting, includes David P. Kapp, of State College.

John D. Meyer, of Tyrone, is assisting the NRA committee.

Group Six comprises seventy-nine banks in the six counties. The code committee in adopting its regulations under the blue eagle, has embodied the minimum service charges which will be permitted in any district of Pennsylvania under the NRA.

In placing the NRA regulations and service charges in effect the NRA committee makes clear the fact that under the NRA both the national and state banking departments are requiring their member banks to make service charges on all transactions in sufficient amount as to make each and every depositor account self-supporting.

A desperate effort is being made on the part of Lewisburg citizens and organizations to have the traffic hazard at Ninth and Market streets where the routes 404 and 45 intersect, eliminated by the installation of a signal light. Many accidents have already occurred on this corner, two of them of serious nature. Last week the State Highway department changed the stop signs from the north and south route to the east and west route, causing much disturbance. Up to this time much of the traffic is going through both ways without stopping and observers report that many accidents are missed by the narrowest of margins.

OVERHEARD.

Bill: Everybody is talking about the outcome of the Hallow'en pranks engaged in by a number of boys from town and nearby.

John: Yes, and the comments are not at all favorable. It does seem that there ought to have been some way whereby imprisonment of the youths could have been avoided.

Bill: The boys, ah, of them, were without funds. It does seem strange, too that if any of them would have had means they could have avoided imprisonment, while the less fortunate in this world's goods could not do so.

John: A hard world, some will say. Here were a group of boys who had no intention whatever of doing any one harm, or had the least idea that their acts would result in making criminals of them. They did what was done in this borough by every normal boy for many, many years—no more. It happened that this year someone drove a car into the rubbish placed on the diamond.

Bill: The informer, who was he, a townsman?

John: No. A State Highway patrolman stated with emphasis that no resident in the borough or out of it made demand for action. A patrolman was the prosecutor.

Bill: Not all the boys corralled by the cop were sent to jail, were they?

John: There were in the mix a half-dozen youths under sixteen years of age; under the age for prosecution for such light offense, and two of these, Attorney Orvis brought out, had no part in the affair and another over sixteen also proved himself free of guilt. The other four youngsters were turned over to the juvenile officer, Rev. Wm. C. Thompson.

Bill: And all this and the juvenile officer is the only name mentioned?

John: Yes, and that is the only name that will be.

Bill: Criminal cases are legitimate news, are they not?

John: Of course, but here is a difference: Here there was no criminal intent. Why parade names in such cases? You see, Bill, boys of much less prospect than some of these in question have made good citizens in later years.

Bill: You are right. It would not help these youngsters, but be a handicap, to parade their names before the public.

John: Think of this: Nearly every newspaper in the country is running a column of news happenings of 30, 40, 50 or more years ago. When this particular incident reaches one of these periods, some thoughtless "historian" might reprint the names in connection with his account, and—

Bill: At the first period these boys would be a bit past middle life, and at least some, if not all, good, substantial, honorable citizens, with a wife and children. What heartaches a reciting would bring.

Whether or not A. E. Gleim, the representative of the Printing and Publishing company, who came to Bellefonte several months ago and at once set machinery in motion to obtain data to be used in a directory of Centre county proposed to be published, will return, is not known. He left the county seat, it is said, without leaving a forwarding address several weeks back. The room he occupied has been leased for a store room. In Centre Hall and Potter township, Miss Charlotte Keller and Alfred Crawford, respectively, obtained information to be used in the new directory. Business men, also, were solicited for advertising by the promoter.
