FARM CALENDAR.

Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

EXPECT PESTS NEXT YEAR—Numerous May beetles appearing this spring are an indication that little white grub damage will be done this year. Since the grubs, pupae, and adults occupy a 3-year cycle, eggs laid now will hatch into grubs which may be expected to do considerable damage in old sod plowed down in fall or spring. Early fall plowing late in September or early in October is the most suitable practice for control of the grubs.

HELP FOR HAYMAKERS—Models of a hay chute for use in the barn loft, a one-man hay rack, and a Shaver truss will be on exhibit in the hay school at the Farmers' Field Day of the Pennsylvania State College, Thursday, June 14.

LOCUSTS TO MAKE VISIT—Sixteen western Pennsylvania counties will be visited by 17-year locusts early this month. The heaviest emergency is expected about June 15. While there is no acceptable means of stopping egg laying by the locusts, which is the way injury is done, the insects may be excluded from young trees by ordinary mosquito netting.

KEEP CHICKS HEALTHY—Strong chicks hatched early and brooded in thoroughly cleaned and disinfected brooder houses moved to clean ground should get a good start. Much of the trouble with coccidiosis begins after the chicks are several weeks old.

STIMULATE TREE GROWTH—Winter injured apple trees should receive an application of nitrate of soda and the soil should be thoroughly disced or trow up with a heavy service harrow. These treatments will make available a liberal supply of nitrate and thereby stimulate growth.

Mr. Hunter had undergone a serious operation at the University of Pennsylvania hospital nearly five months ago, and until three weeks ago he had been improving steadily. His death came as a shock to his many friends.

Born at Hunter's Park, five miles from Bellefonte, on Dec. 1, 1863, he was aged 70 years, 7 months and 4 days. He was the son of Benjamin F. and Nancy Corl Hunter, both of prominent Benner township families. His father was a member of the State legislature.

In 1890 he enlisted in the Pennsylvania National Guard, and served as a non-commissioned officer during the riots at Homestead, Pa. In recognition of his meritorious work he received a commission as staff sergeant on the Division Staff of the State and later received an appointment as Colonel of the 5th Regiment.

In November 1931 Mr. Hunter was elected County Treasurer. Although a staunch Democrat, he was liked and admired by members of both political parties.

During his illness his work in the county office has been taken care of by his daughter Mrs. Henrietta Wells, who was sworn in as deputy treasurer recently.

Mr. Hunter was a member of the Bellefonte Presbyterian church, and was prominent in Masonic organizations. He took an active part in civic projects, and aided in securing several industries for Bellefonte.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Wells, Mrs. Wallace Kelley, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Edward Foley, of Montoursville. On son, B. Graham Hunter, of Philadelphia, also survives, together with a brother, J. Dorsey Hunter, of Bellefonte.
