C. B. Stover is installing a heating plant in a private residence on Beaver Avenue, State College.

Another car load of steel for the new bridge over Penns Creek arrived on Monday.

County Commissioners Spearly and Brungart, on Monday, were looking over the iron bridge over Sinking creek built by the State in 1898, the wooden structure having been carried away by the June flood of that year.

The bridge was built under an old law providing for bridges over charted streams for rafting, to be erected by the State, placing the maintaining of them on the counties in which they are located. The stream is charted to a point a few hundred feet west of the bridge in question, where was located a landing place for rafts carrying wheat for the eastern market. At this time the commissioners are contemplating replacing the girders and probably making other steel substitutions. There was present with the commissioners a representative of the Milton Iron and Steel Co., also, A. B. Bailey, a bridge builder, representing the State Highway Department.

One hundred and sixty-eight CCC boys from Po Valley camp are at present building a road from the Synagogue church, along the public road passing through the south side of Georges Valley, to the summit of Po Mountain where it connects with the old detour also known as the Garrity road. This road crosses the Decker Valley road at the David Lingle place and leads over Big Po Mountain. The men are now working in the vicinity of the Synagogue. Po Valley camp now has a roster of over 200 men.

The Gregg Township Vocational school soccer team is doing faithful practice and is anticipating its full share of "wins" in the approaching soccer season. J. W. Decker is coaching the boys.

Mrs. John D. Heckman was out on Sunday for the first time since returning home from the Centre County hospital.

George Bartley is painting his home near the P. R. R. station, using white for the body, with green trim. The first coat was completed the beginning of this week. Improvements to the structure had been made prior to painting.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Shunk, on Sunday, autoed to Juniata where they visited with R. M. Lowmaster, a nephew of Mrs. Shunk, who is living in a cabin at Riegel's Gap and is doing trucking on a seven acre tract. At Port Matilda, Mr. and Mrs. Z. W. Woodring were picked up and accompanied the Shunks on the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. George Reish, of Mifflinburg, took possession of the restaurant building next to the Meyer Bros. garage, and after the interior is given a thorough renovation, a restaurant will be opened. Light lunches, soft drinks and ice cream, tobaccos and candies will be served. The Reishes have been in the restaurant business for a number of years, their last place of business having been in the Kleckner block, Mifflinburg, up to a year ago.

Mrs. Adam Heckman, of Renovo, is reported to be holding her own after having been confined to bed for six weeks, due to a paralytic stroke received a few days after having arrived at the home of J. C. A. Heckman, near the Beaver Dam school house.

Another good cake just like the last one

gives uniform results

★ How often does your eager family admonish you to bake another cake "just as good as the last one"?

Electric cooking gives uniform results. You have the same oven conditions every time. You know exactly when to put the pan in the oven, and the temperature is kept right throughout the baking process. Electricity makes excellent cooks out of good cooks, good cooks out of mediocre.

For the average family of four, electricity for cooking now costs but $2.25 a month . . . very little more than ordinary fuels. Decide today to cook the modern way.

Now! A full-feature Electric Range costs no more than an ordinary stove.
