Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

A QUEER BREAKFAST

A LONG lane leads from Farmer Brown's barnyard down to his cornfield on the Green Meadows. Very early one morning Peter Rabbit took it into his funny little head to run down that long lane. Now at a certain place beside that long lane was a gravelly bank into which Farmer Brown had dug for gravel to put on the roadway near his house. As Peter was scampering past this place he in that gravel pit. Peter stopped short, then sat up to stare.

It was Mourner the Dove whom Peter saw. His body was a little bigger than that of Welcome Robin, but his slender neck, longer tail and wings made him appear considerably bigger. His shape reminded Peter at once of the pigeons up at Farmer Brown's. His back was grayish brown, varying to bluish-gray. The crown and upper parts of his head were bluish-gray. His breast was reddishbuff shading down into a soft buff. His bill was black and his feet red, The two middle feathers of his tail were longest and of the color of his back. The other feathers were slatygray with little black bands and tipped with white. On his wings were a few scattered black spots, and there was one under each ear. But it was the sides of his neck which were the most beautiful part of Mourner. When untouched by the Jolly Little Sunbeams his neck appeared much like his breast, but the moment the sides were touched by the Jolly Little Sunbeams they seemed to be of many colors constantly changing, which, as you know, is called iridescence.

But it was not Mourner's appearance which made Peter stare; it was what he was doing. He was walking about and every new and then picking up something, quite as if he were getting his breakfast in that gravel pit. Peter couldn't imagine anything good

By Bob Nichols Shooting Editor, Field and Stream

ONE of the commonest errors of the novice upland bunter is to try to shoot a gun that is too long in the barrel. There is a widespread belief that long barrels make a gun shoot harder. Practically speaking, this isn't true. The short barrel gun shoots just as hard, and kills game just as far away, as the old-fashioned "Long Tom." The gun with 32, or even 30-inch barrels, is too long. You will do better work with 28-better still, with 26-inch barrels. I am even of the opinion that most standard gunstocks are slightly too long. The standard stock is about 14 inches from front of trigger to the middle of the butt-plate. My favorite gun has 26inch barrel and 131/2-inch stock. The shortened gun-at the barrel as well as at the stock-speeds up your handling of it tremendously.

In the latest designs of American shotguns being turned out today, one trend is definitely towards the 26-inch barrel. This is undoubtedly the gun for upland use. Robert Churchill, the famous English gun maker, was the ploneer in this field of shotgun research. Some years ago he brought out his now well-known line XXV guns, so named because of their 25inch barrels-and most immediately it became apparent that the users of these short-barrel guns were to do better work in the field than sportsmen of equal skill using longer tubes. The reason is easy to demonstrate. The shorter you make your "pointer," the quicker you can point it. Try pointing with a walking stick. Much quicker. Try pointing with your finger-

If you want to learn to shoot, and learn it quickly, begin now with a short-barreled, lightweight 20-guage. Have it properly stocked to fit you. Then watch your scoring begin to

Just within the last year I have had a fine opportunity to observe how the right gun can make a wonderful difference in speeding up a man's acquisition of skill. I have a friend who has been hunting for the past ten years. Up until last summer, even with all his experience, he was still a miserable shot. Shortly after I met him early last spring he told me, jokingly and regretfully, that the only reason his friends ever took him on a hunt was because he has big feet and 31/2 yards 36-inch fabric and % yard had the reputation for kicking up more | 2-inch ribbon. game than any other shooter in the

He finally showed me his gun. It was all I expected it would be. A tipped the scales at exactly seven and three-quarter pounds. Moreover, it was bored modified and full chokemuch too close for a field gun. As a crowning fault it had a good 3 inches of drop at the heel of the buttstockin other words, an "under shooting" gun. The big drop explained why he could kill an occasional rabbit, for the right way to shoot rabbits is to slightly under-shoot. But pheasant, woodcock, or grouse, were too much for him. He had arrived at the hopeless stage where he was convinced that he could never become a decent shot.

Shortly after that he did me a kind favor. In return I presented him with an extra gun I had in my cabinet-a neat little 20-gauge pump gun, with 26inch modified choke barrel, that weighed just short of six pounds. He was grateful, but just a little dubious about so small a gun. In fact the gun did look funny in his hands, because he is better than a six-footer.

During the remainder of the summer and on up through September, I took him crow and hawk shooting frequently. Slowly I taught him that he had to swing from behind his target, swing past, and shoot ahead of it. Before long he was tumbling the cornstealers and chicken-snatchers from 30 to 40 yards out of the sky with fair regularity-and was he delighted! Later, during the hunting season, he shot with the same friends who formerly regarded him as the "game dog" of the party. Only this time the laugh was on them. He killed grouse, pheasant, woodcock-and taking bunnies, he told me later, was like shooting fish in a bathtub. On two occasions he out-shot every man on the party. Anyone can learn to shoot if he gets the RIGHT gun!

Opossum Is Protected,

but Is Found Nuisance State wild life investigators who are endeavoring to determine whether the opossum should be classed as predatory in Michigan have so far found little to justify the protection that is now afforded this animal. Paul Hickie, state analyst, who has examined the stomach contents of a number of opossums, states that the specimens examined have been guilty of eating both eggs and birds, the latter of which he believes to belong to the pheasant family, and that these findings indicate the essum to be of no benefit whatever. The opposum made its first appearance in the state about five years ago. It has long been declared a nuisance and a pest by farmers, hunters and others, despite the protection afforded
