Farmers are complaining of rot in potatoes.

The charge of drunken driver was preferred against John Pettey, Bellefonte, Sunday morning.

Dr. Hugh Morrow became ill a few days ago, and while his condition is improving he continues to be confined to the house.

A son was born a few days ago to Mr. and Mrs. E. Victor Haney, at Curwensville where the father is employed as a teacher in the High school.

Russell W. Bohh, grammar grade teacher, joined his 7th and 8th grade pupils in a wiener roast in the Pennington woods, last Thursday evening.

Edward I. Feltenberger, the crack potato grower in upper Brush Valley, is lifting potatoes at this time, and finds the yield and quality of the crop very satisfactory.

Miss Genevieve Ruble, for several months a stenographer in the Bellefonte Academy, is now doing stenographic work in the chemistry department at Penn State.

Our informant who gave the name of the latest arrival in the W. F. McClellan home, State College, missed the mark one hundred per cent. The young Miss has been named Byrna Anne.

Miss Alice Foust, one of the outstanding girls in her class in the Centre Hall High school, entered the State Teachers' College, West Chester, the institution from which her mother, Mrs. Charles Foust, is a graduate.

Yesterday (Wednesday) Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Kryder left here for Monterey, Virginia, where Mr. Kryder will attend a meeting of the directors of the U. S. Lumber Company. He will attend the meeting in the capacity of a director.

Albert Emery, rural mail carrier from Centre Hall, on Tuesday moved from the Brungart home to that occupied until recently by Prof. J. F. Wetzel. Mr. Emery purchased the home he is now located in from his father, C. F. Emery.

Rev. Mr. Rumberger, of Phillipsburg, filled the appointments on the Penn's Valley charge on Sunday for the pastor, Rev. Greenhoe, who is ill. The young minister is without a charge at the present time, and has been supplying for pastors whenever invited to do so.

Concrete laying on the new road over Seven Mountains began Thursday on the short section beginning at Potters Mills. The "batching" is being done at one of the Shaffer quarries, near Milroy. Concrete is being laid in half-width, the first half, the west section, having been completed.

The Centre Hall baseball club entered the confines of the Rockview Penitentiary grounds, Saturday, to meet the convict ball team. For 8 innings the locals were held rudderless, but in the ninth an awakening brought six runs to win the game, 6 to 2. Prof. Jamison's "rocks" proved hard cracking for the Pen boys.

Howard Struble was through Penns Valley on Tuesday, in the interest of the Bellefonte Y. M. C. A., and spent a pleasant half hour with the Reporter. He informs us that our mutual friend, William Rupert, now living at 533 Brookside Avenue, Redlands, California, attained his 81st birthday a few days ago, and is well, happy and contented.

Students from Centre Hall High school who are taking advance educational work in other institutions than Penn State College are: John Spicker, Thompson College, York; Hugh Morrow, Jr., Bucknell University, Lewisburg; Margaret Delaney and Anna Wert, Lock Haven State Teachers' College; Alice Foust, West Chester State Teachers' College.

The car load of horses, mules and colts offered on Friday by William Gruenwald were all sold. Those held over at the time of the sale were sold the following morning. The prices were very fair, the best animals seemed to be in demand and brought top figures. The colts—horse and mule—old from spring, and younger, sold at between $35.00 and $40.00.

A mule purchased by Henry Houser, near Linden Hall, broke loose from his owner, ran into the Rudy barn west of town, onto the barn floor and out the front door, dropping to the ground. The injuries were such that the animal was later killed. It is stated on good authority that while Mr. Houser made no claim whatever, the dealer, Wm. Gruenwald, nevertheless, made a handsome concession in settlement.

A second effort is being made to straighten and strengthen the pole carrying the lightning rod and vane on the Lutheran church steeple. The steeple is about one hundred feet high and work must be done from the outside. It is probable that the spire will be improved otherwise since a scaffolding must be constructed its full length. The work is being carried on by Miles Bargey and Jerry Albright, of Spring Mills, and Floyd Snyder, Centre Hall. The church was built in 1885.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Foreman, of Canfield, Ohio, and their son, Ray Foreman, and wife, of Youngstown, Ohio, were recent visitors here among relatives. The young man, employed in one of the large steel mills where reinforcement rods are made for concrete roads, related a horrible sight he witnessed in the mill. A rod, considerably heavier than a lead pencil, was thrust through the foot close to the ankle of a workman. To remove it, it became necessary to cut the rod on both sides of the foot and then draw it out.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Judge Fleming is holding court this week in Allegheny county.

Rev. S. F. Greenhoe's condition during the past week has changed but slightly, if at all.

Miss Betty Ebricht, a second-year student at Penn State, accepted a bid to become a member of Alpha Chi Omega fraternity.

A half-hour radio program over Station WRAK, Williamsport, was put on by the Centre Hall Choral Club Monday evening from 6:30 to 7:00 o'clock. Mrs. Alberta Krader, of Bellefonte, director of the club, supplied several numbers, accompanying herself on the zither.

William Dashem, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dashem, Centre Hall, R. D., is a Penn State student in his Junior year. Mr. Dashem was not mentioned last week in the list of Centre Hall High school graduates attending Penn State. The omission was an oversight.

William Gruenwald, the horse dealer, left here for his home in South Dakota, today (Thursday), having closed up all matters relative to his last sale, on Friday. The fact that he informed the Reporter that he expected to return with another lot of horses within a few weeks indicates he was pleased with past sales. Mr. Gruenwald was accompanied here by a brother, Charles Gruenwald, and two sons, William, Jr., and Orval, aged 16 and 13 years, respectively.

The coloration of leaves is brought about by a cessation of chlorophyll manufactured in the leaves and the presence of anthocyanins in the cell sap. Chlorophyll is responsible for the green color of the leaves in the spring and summer months. When this substance breaks down in the fall it decomposes into yellow granules, producing the autumn color of the walnuts, catalpa, chestnut, elm, hickory, beech, poplar and tulip. This dispels the general belief that the coloration of forests is due to frost.

Telephone Heroines to Get Medals

FREDDA V. RICHARDSON

MARGARET B. GRANT

Miss Richardson, night operator for the Bell Telephone Company at Huntingdon, Pa., and Mrs. Grant, night operator in charge of the Diamond State Telephone Company's central office in Dover, Del., have been cited for Theodore N. Vail Bronze Medals for "outstanding acts of public service."

Vail medals represent the highest award of the Bell System and are awarded annually to telephone employees for acts or services which conspicuously illustrate the ideals of public service held by the late Mr. Vail, former president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Miss Richardson remained at her post on the second floor of a building at Huntingdon while flames from a fire in the street level portion of the building licked at the flooring beneath her feet. The blaze broke out shortly after 3 A. M. on May 5, 1933. Someone notified Miss Richardson of her peril, but the plucky Bell operator refused to abandon her place at the switchboard until she had rung the fire alarm, notified the Fire Department, advised her chief operator and put through other important emergency calls.

Disregarding her protests that she be allowed to continue operation of the switchboard, firemen finally insisted upon carrying her down the ladder to safety and took her to her home. Miss Richardson soon returned, however, and after the flames had been brought under control, went back to the switchboard. She resumed operation of the switchboard until relieved by other operators.

"Her steadiness, presence of mind and devotion to duty," says the citation, "were in line with the best traditions of the Bell System."

Mrs. Grant is to receive a Vail Medal "for initiative, good judgment and resourcefulness in an emergency."

An early-morning train wreck at Wyoming, Del., four miles from Dover, afforded Mrs. Grant an opportunity to display her devotion to duty and resourcefulness.

"The Cavalier," crack 12-car express of the Pennsylvania Railroad, en route from Cape Charles, Va. to New York, with 39 members of the Boston Red Sox among its passengers, rced through an open switch at Wyoming shortly before 4 A. M. on Sunday, April 2, 1933. The engine man and fireman were killed instantly. Thirteen passengers were hurt.

Mrs. Grant was alone at the Dover switchboard when word of the wreck reached her. Receiving no response when she called the railroad stations at Wyoming and Dover, Mrs. Grant called the home of the Dover station agent. He asked her to notify the train dispatcher at Wilmington. Then, on her own initiative, Mrs. Grant called the railroad physicians and the State Highway Police. Then she rang the firehouse for the ambulance and called three volunteer members of the ambulance crew at their homes.

During all this time Mrs. Grant was handling toll and long distance calls from the baseball players and other passengers on the wrecked train, as well as the unusual volume of local calls prompted by curiosity over the nature of the disaster.

Miss Doris Marguerite Stark and Mrs. Vivian Scanlan, Bell operators at Smethport, Pa., and Robert Ridpath Saddington, a telephone installer in Philadelphia, were cited for honorable mention in connection with the Vail Medal awards. Miss Stark and Mrs. Scanlan were honored for their conduct on January 19, 1933, when they remained at the Smethport switchboard to spread word of a serious fire close to the central office building. Saddington was cited for his expert and persistent application of artificial respiration on December 17, 1933, in the case of a woman who had been overcome by gas fumes. He is credited with having saved her life.

ALTOONA PLANS NEW HOME WEEK CELEBRATION

Six-Day Program of Entertainment Scheduled October 7 to 12; All Communities Invited.

The most outstanding program of entertainment, parades and exhibits ever to be held in any section of Pennsylvania will feature New Home Week, October 7-12, in Altoona.

Plans for the event, which includes a six-day program, with every day offering something new and different, are in the making by a committee of more than 100 of the city's industrial leaders and business men.

Citizens of communities in every section of the state are invited to come to Altoona for the entire week's program or at last for some part of the event. The committee feels that the success of the event depends upon other communities giving their support to the occasion as well as citizens of the city.

Residents of Altoona have the greater responsibility in the program as they will be solicited for the purchase of souvenirs, the income of which will be used to further the efforts of the Altoona-Chamber of Commerce Industrial committee in bringing new industries to the city.

The returns of the drive for these funds and the result obtained in contracting for additional industries will not only be beneficial to Altoona but to other communities within the state boundaries.

The program of the week opens on Sunday, October 7, which is known as church attendance day.

Early on the morning of Monday, October 8, "New Home Week" will be announced in all sections of the city by heralds on horseback.

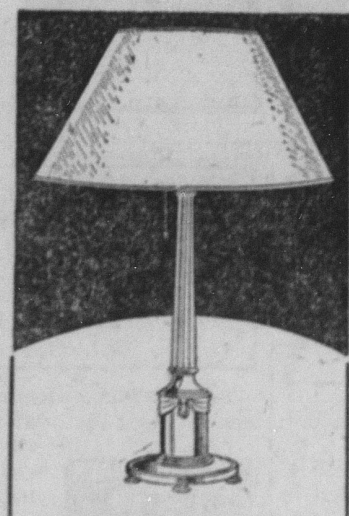

Tuesday and Wednesday will bring bazaars, block dances and the opening of the Industrial Exhibit at Jaffa mosque.

Wednesday is marked as one of the feature days on the program with a mammoth street parade in the early evening.

The committee emphatically stressed the invitation to residents of all cities, towns and communities to attend the event. From present analysis the New Home Week will be a highlight in the history of Altoona, Blair county and the state of Pennsylvania.

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders from Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

DESTROY BEAN BEETLES—The number of bean beetles can be reduced substantially if the old vines are pulled and burned in the small garden or plowed under deeply in the larger field. Where the leaves are still green large numbers of Mexican bean beetles cling to the leaves and these can be destroyed before they proceed farther in their cycle.

DO NOT RUIN ALFALFA—Many beginners with alfalfa make the mistake of clipping the new seeding or attempting to harvest a crop of hay from it. Unless weeds get very bad and threaten to smother the alfalfa, the growth should not be clipped. Pasturing the top off closely is perhaps worse than mowing. There should be at least six inches of growth left in the fall for winter protection.

BLANCH CELERY IN FIELD—Although green celery appears to be increasing in popularity, the white or green stalks still are generally used. Boards, heavy paper, 4-inch drain tile, or soil may be used to exclude the light from the growing stalks and destroy their green color.

PLANT FLOWERING BULBS—Autumn is the time to prepare for the spring display of blooms from flowering bulbs. Most of these early blooming flowers prefer planting in September, October or nearly November, so that the roots may be developed before the ground has become frozen.

HOUSE THE PULLETS—Pullets should be transferred to laying quarters just before they start to lay. The large well-developed pullets should be housed and the others as they mature.
