Two passengers—Mrs. Mary Tenallo and James Tenallo, of Pleasant Gap, in a car operated by W. Clayton Duck, also of Pleasant Gap, were injured when the driver lost control of the vehicle as it was descending the hill at the Centre County hospital and struck a tree. Mrs. Tenallo suffered lacerations of the jaw and had several teeth knocked out, and James Tenallo sustained lacerations of the mouth when they were thrown from the rear seat to the front seat of the car.

Phillip C. Bradford, long station agent at Lemont, is recovering from a serious illness due to bladder trouble and is now able to be out of bed, but his physician notified the P. R. R. that he would be unable to resume his post at the Lemont station for a period of six weeks. Two of Mrs. Bradford's sisters have also been ill. Mrs. Sadie Bohn has just recovered from an illness due to complications. She lives with her son, Fred Bohn, near Millheim. The second sister, Mrs. Frank Ishler, of Centre Hall, has severely thoroughly recovered from a protracted attack of pneumonia that confined her to bed for several weeks.

Squire J. W. Adams and Mrs. Adams, of Huntingdon, motored to Centre Hall last Friday on one of their frequent trips to Penns Valley, the scene of Mr. Adams' youth. He is a native of Millheim, and while a boy labored on a farm for Samuel Krammer, then tenant on the William Henry farm, two miles east of Old Fort. After his marriage he became a resident of Anaronsburg, then of Milliflingburg, and finally located at Huntingdon, where for 32 years he was employed at the State Industrial School in that city. He was retired last year, and presented with a gold medal in recognition of his valued services to that institution. By trade he is a painter and contractor, and did an extensive business in that line at one time. For the past 26 years he has held the office of justice of the peace in Huntingdon, and last fall was re-elected to a six-year term, which attests his popularity in his home community. He and Mrs. Adams spent last winter at St. Petersburg, Florida, and enjoyed the winter season so well that they are hoping to repeat the delightful experiences again.

The other car was operated by Ben Gryetko. The accident was caused when Ripka is said to have made a left hand turn at the time Gryetko was in the act of passing him.

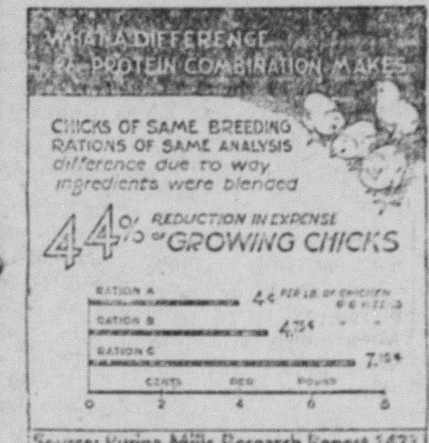

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Several young men from this section were landed in Elk creek, at the second bridge south of Millheim on the road to Coburn. The car, a sedan, plunged down a steep embankment into several feet of water. None of the occupants were injured.

Cost of Feed Important in Chick Raising

College experiment stations some time ago announced that the protein combination within a feed makes a difference, not only in results shown in chicks, but also in cost of their raising. Chicks of the same breeding, when fed mash of the same analysis, but containing various blends of proteins on which the mash is built, may show a difference of as much as 44% in their feed cost for the first six weeks.

"In feeds, as in everything else, it is a matter of efficiency," says Mr. E.

H. Powell, Manager of Purina Mills Experimental Farm.

"Everything has to be taken into consideration in constructing a really good chick mash. The effect of the feed on the livability of the chicks, on the rapidity of growth, on their feathering, pigmentation, bone and flesh development, are all important. Yet unless we take into consideration the egg laying ability of the pullet grown by the mash the feeder will lose money."

One set of experiments, continued for several years on twenty different feeds, involved the checking of over 20,000 separate weighings of baby chicks and hens. The worthwhile results in terms of money that might be saved per chick is at least in the accompanying chart. Differences in cost of as much as 3.16c per pound in producing baby chicks means many dollars for a poultry owner who is figuring his success for the year in terms of hundreds or thousands of chickens.

The first six weeks are only the beginning of his poultry flock. From that time on special growing feeds must supply energy, bone and muscle building materials which will bring the pullets into laying with full body development, and at five months of age; and at the same time put broilers on the market at the earliest possible date. Neither a high price nor the tag on the bag point out which is the best feed. The answer to that question lies within the feed itself. Poultry feeds above all others need the expert attention that only experience can supply. They must be selected with full knowledge as to source of nutrients. The proportioning of these nutrients is a question of careful manufacture. Only thus is built a feed that, while getting results, sells at a price sufficiently reasonable to be profitable to the poultryman.

COSTS LESS NOW TO GROW CHICKS

The saving that is possible in feeding chicks during the first six weeks of their life is most clearly shown by recent tabulations. Where formerly ingredients were mixed together to form a certain per cent of protein, modern research proves that such mixing may prove costly to the owner.

From a series of records involving the weighing of thousands of chicks from one day out of the shell to six weeks of age, accurate computation is now available on what to expect in the way of returns from every dollar expended in feed. Research

MOTHERS SHOULD NOT TAKE CHANCES

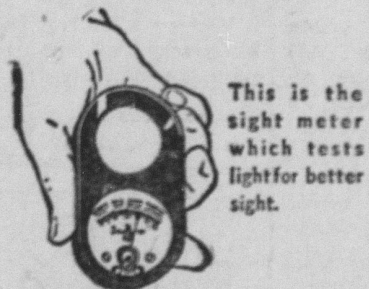

When your child does his lessons he works out every problem carefully. He knows that guessing is dangerous.

More important than any lesson is the prevention of eyestrain. You may THINK that the light in your home is good but do you KNOW that it is good enough to prevent eyestrain? Your eyes cannot tell you. They can only guess, and the guess may be wrong. The certain way of testing the seeing conditions in your home is with a SIGHT METER.

This new instrument measures the intensity of light. It shows if your home is safe for seeing.

Protect your family's eyes. Arrange for a sight meter test today. It will cost you nothing.

files of Purina Mills Experiment Farm yield the interesting chart here reproduced. Three groups of chicks tested on three separate mashes, all having the same values according to old methods of analysis, but differing in the manner in which the ingredients were proportioned, show a wide range of costs. Group X, with the best scientific proportioning, is within a few cents of being worth double the old style ration represented by Group Z. Group Y was mixed according to some of the better practices of feeders. Group X was mixed according to the exclusive data developed by the Research Division of Purina Mills, the result of years of analytical, biological and practical farm tests.
