An impressive scene staged at the Goodhart morgue was enacted without previous rehearsal during the time the body of "Squire" Dauberman lay on a slab. A small group of young men whom the "Squire" had befriended on many occasions and whose lives were an open book to him, silently and reverently approached the bler, and while gazing upon the dead friend, tears welled from the eyes.

The ladies of Central Queen Temple, K G. E., on Thursday evening, gave a Hallowe'en party, inviting the families of members. The attendance was quite large and a delightful time was head by all present, the refreshments including a long list of choice foods and topped out with pumpkin ple and cider.
